Stands Alone, Faces, and Other Poems Patrick Russell LeBeau, 1999 Stands Alone Faces and Other Poems Patrick LeBeau's first collection is a self reflective work on identity ancestry and family relationships voiced in three parts Stands Alone the first voice heard is the singular he an entity lost in a sea of loneliness loneliness that freezes growth and stagnates creativity It places the self in a dizzy reality of emotions and knee jerk reactions cut off from the community He wanders seeking connections to land and community but often finding confusion and despair and occasionally clarity and humor Alone he fends alone and suffers decisions made with only his counsel The voice in part two moves the he to embrace community and a place of identity exploration and discovery A language is learned A language of stories that enables him to link his own personal history to a larger Native community and experience Through this found relationship with ancestry and family he becomes receptive to spiritual teachings and cultural practices Part three sets he free to consolidate the pieces of his memories and experiences into one large creative net of experimentation and form Desiring inclusion of personal history and reflections regardless of notions of good or bad positive or negative he finally settles on a skin he can live with and within Keewaydinoquay, Stories from My Youth Keewaydinoquay,2006 The stories of the Michigan childhood of a girl of both Anishinaabeg and English descent The Potawatomi Indians of Michigan, 1843-1904 Raymond C. McClurken,2009 In his thoroughly researched chronicle McClurken documents in words and images every major lineage and family of the Little River Ottawas He describes the Band s struggles to find land to call its own over several centuries including the hardships that began with European exploration of what is now the upper Midwest
