The Zoological Record, 1994 Biocommunication of Archaea Guenther Witzany, 2017-09-27 Archaea represent a third domain of life with unique properties not found in the other domains Archaea actively compete for environmental resources They perceive themselves and can distinguish between self and non self They process and evaluate available information and then modify their behaviour accordingly They assess their surroundings estimate how much energy they need for particular goals and then realize the optimum variant These highly diverse competences show us that this is possible owing to signaling mediated communication processes within archaeal cells intra organismic between the same related and different archaeal species interorganismic and between archaea and nonarchaeal organisms transorganismic This is crucial in coordinating growth and development shape and dynamics Such communication must function both on the local level and between widely separated colony parts This allows archaea to coordinate appropriate response behaviors in a differentiated manner to their current developmental status and physiological influences This book will orientate further investigations on how archaeal ecosphere inhabitants communicate with each other to coordinate their behavioral patterns and what's the role of viruses in this highly dynamic interactional networks
