The United Nations World Water Development Report UNESCO World Water Assessment Programme, 2022-03-02 Accounting for approximately 99% of all liquid freshwater on Earth groundwater has the potential to provide societies with tremendous social economic and environmental benefits and opportunities However this natural resource is often poorly understood and consequently undervalued mismanaged and even abused In spite of its overall abundance groundwater remains vulnerable to over exploitation and pollution both of which can have devastating effects on the resource and its availability In the context of growing water scarcity across many parts of the world the enormous potential of groundwater and the need to manage it sustainably can no longer be overlooked The 2022 edition of The United Nations World Water Development Report describes the challenges and opportunities associated with the development management and governance of groundwater across the world

Assessment of Power Sector Reforms in Viet Nam Asian Development Bank,2015-09-01 Viet Nam envisions a completely competitive power sector in the long term including full wholesale and retail competition To attain this goal it unbundled its power sector s monopoly structure and instituted institutional regulatory and pricing reforms Although considerable progress has been made implementation has not been expeditious with the government still retaining a strong vested ownership and management interest in the power sector Further restructuring is needed to ensure complete independence of the system players and to attain pricing transparency In this country report the Asian Development Bank assesses Viet Nam s experience in reforming its power sector for insights that other Asian developing economies could find useful when pursuing their own power sector planning and policy and strategy formulation ERDA Research Abstracts ,1976 ERDA Research Abstracts United States.
