Family-making Françoise Baylis, Carolyn McLeod, 2014 This volume explores the ethics of making or expanding families through adoption or technologically assisted reproduction For many people these methods are separate and distinct they can choose either adoption or assisted reproduction But for others these options blend together For example in some jurisdictions the path of assisted reproduction for same sex couples is complicated by the need for the partner who is not genetically related to the resulting child to adopt this child if she wants to become the child's legal parent The essays in this volume critically examine moral choices to pursue adoption assisted reproduction or both and highlight the social norms that can distort decision making Among these norms are those that favour people having biologically related children bionormativity or that privilege a traditional understanding of family as a heterosexual unit with one or more children where both parents are the genetic biological legal and social parents of these children As a whole the book looks at how adoption and assisted reproduction are morally distinct from one another but also emphasizes how the two are morally similar

Choosing one the other or both of these approaches to family making can be complex in some respects but ought to be simple in others provided that one's main goal is to become a parent
