

WHAT EVERY PARENT
SHOULD KNOW ABOUT

FOOD ALLERGIES

IN BABIES AND CHILDREN

According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, ‘About 7.6% of children have food allergies.’ This increase is of concern to parents and health care professionals.

Parents of children with food allergies must take extra precautions when dining out and purchasing food for their families, as even the smallest trace of an allergen can lead to a life-threatening allergic reaction. Fortunately, parents can take steps to protect their children from allergens and effectively manage symptoms.
