The Long Shadow Karl Alexander, Doris Entwisle, Linda Olson, 2014-05-31 A volume in the American Sociological Association's Rose Series in Sociology West Baltimore stands out in the popular imagination as the quintessential inner city gritty run down and marred by drugs and gang violence Indeed with the collapse of manufacturing jobs in the 1970s the area experienced a rapid onset of poverty and high unemployment with few public resources available to alleviate economic distress But in stark contrast to the image of a perpetual urban underclass depicted in television by shows like The Wire sociologists Karl Alexander Doris Entwisle and Linda Olson present a more nuanced portrait of Baltimore's inner city residents that employs important new research on the significance of early life opportunities available to low income populations

The Long Shadow focuses on children who grew up in west Baltimore neighborhoods and others like them throughout the city tracing how their early lives in the inner city have affected their long term well being Although research for this book was conducted in Baltimore that city's struggles with deindustrialization white flight and concentrated poverty were characteristic of most East Coast and Midwest manufacturing cities The experience of Baltimore's children who came of age during this era is mirrored in the experiences of urban children across the nation For 25 years the authors of The Long Shadow tracked the life progress of a group of almost 800 predominantly low income Baltimore school children through the Beginning School Study Youth Panel BSSYP The study monitored the children's transitions to young adulthood with special attention to how opportunities available to them as early as first grade shaped their socioeconomic status as adults The authors' fine grained analysis confirms that the children who lived in more cohesive neighborhoods had stronger families and attended better schools tended to maintain a higher economic status later in life As young adults they held higher income jobs and had achieved more personal milestones such as marriage than their lower status counterparts Differences in race and gender further stratified life opportunities for the Baltimore children As one of the first studies to closely examine the outcomes of inner city whites in addition to African Americans data from the BSSYP shows that by adulthood white men of lower status family background despite attaining less education on average were more likely to be employed than any other group in part due to family connections and long standing racial biases in Baltimore's industrial economy Gender imbalances were also evident the women who were more likely to be working in low wage service and clerical jobs earned less than men African American women were doubly disadvantaged insofar as they were less likely to be in a stable relationship than white women and therefore less likely to benefit from a second income Combining original interviews with Baltimore families teachers and other community members with the empirical data gathered from the authors' groundbreaking research The Long Shadow unravels the complex connections between socioeconomic origins and socioeconomic destinations to reveal a startling and much needed examination of who succeeds and why Young Children at School in the Inner City Barbara Tizard, Peter Blatchford, Jessica Burke, Clare Farquhar, Ian Plewis, 2017-04-28 First published in 1988 this work reports on a major British study of children's progress and behaviour in 33 infant schools The research looks at children from nursery through to junior school and asks why some children had higher attainments and made more progress than others Using observations not only in schools but also interviews with children and parents the children's skills on entering school were found to have an important effect on progress In each school black and white children and girls and boys were studied in order gauge whether gender or ethnicity were related to progress

Growing Up Literate Denny Taylor, Catherine Dorsey-Gaines, 1988 Through their focus on children who were successfully learning to read and write despite extraordinary economic hardship this multiracial team presents new images of the strengths of the family as educator

Doing the Best I Can Kathryn Edin,Timothy J. Nelson,2014-08-15 Across the political spectrum unwed fatherhood is denounced as one of the leading social problems of today Doing the Best I Can is a strikingly rich paradigm shifting look at fatherhood among inner city men often dismissed as deadbeat dads Kathryn Edin and Timothy J Nelson examine how couples in challenging straits come together and get pregnant so quickly without planning The authors chronicle the high hopes for forging lasting family bonds that pregnancy inspires and pinpoint the fatal flaws that often lead to the relationship s demise They offer keen insight into a radical redefinition of family life where the father child bond is central and parental ties are peripheral Drawing on years of fieldwork Doing the Best I Can shows how mammoth economic and cultural changes have transformed the meaning of fatherhood among the urban poor Intimate interviews with more than 100 fathers make real the significant obstacles faced by low income men at every step in the familial process from the difficulties of romantic relationships to decision making dilemmas at conception to the often celebratory moment of birth and finally to the hardships that accompany the early years of the child s life and beyond

A Teacher's Inside Advice to Parents Robert Ward,2016-10-20 It is self evident that parents and children garner the benefits of a great teacher but also pay some kind of price for anything less than a sterling teacher Likewise teachers and children share the advantages of committed capable parents but also suffer consequences when parental responsibility and efficacy falters Therefore parents and teachers must be allies who share common expectations methods and goals This book divided into three parts will help everyone achieve this goal inner city life including such topics as crime drug abuse unemployment and inadequate housing Coming of Age in the Other America Stefanie DeLuca, Susan Clampet-Lundquist, Kathryn Edin, 2016-04-19 Weak labor markets and subpar postsecondary educational institutions including exploitative for profit trade schools and under funded community colleges saddle some young adults with debt and trap them in low wage jobs A third of the youth surveyed particularly those who had not developed identity projects were neither employed nor in school To address these barriers to success the authors recommend initiatives that help transform poor neighborhoods and provide institutional support for the identity projects that motivate youth to stay in school They propose increased regulation of for profit schools and increased college resources for low income high school students Coming of Age in the Other America presents a sensitive nuanced account of how a generation of ambitious but underprivileged young Baltimoreans has struggled to succeed

Unique Challenges in Urban Schools Eric R. Jackson, Carolyn Turner, Dorothy E. Battle, 2015-04-03 This study explores the various ways in which parental involvement can help to increase student academic success More specifically this analysis is based on the notions that 1 parent involvement in inner city schools present unique challenges that are different from the traditional middle class perspective 2 there is value in a cooperative approach between parents teachers and administrators that places the student at the center of each major discussion and decision and 3 illustrates that parental involvement is a real perspective and not just rhetorical jargon Although the focus of this book is in increasing parent involvement in inner city schools readers must be mindful that the ultimate objective for this work and others like it is the successful educating of all children so that they graduate from high school and move into higher education or into the workforce Parent involvement by itself will not ensure academic success of children but combined with many strategies including a clear understanding of the differences between an inner city school environment and a middle class school setting effective teaching sound and relevant curricula safe and secure learning environment and visionary leadership children attending inner city schools can be just as effective as those in middle class school settings
