The Intangible Elements of Culture in Ethnoarchaeological Research Stefano Biagetti,Francesca Lugli,2016-06-02

This volume focuses on the intangible elements of human cultures whose relevance in the study of archaeology has often been claimed but rarely practiced In this book the authors successfully show how the adoption of ethnoarchaeological perspectives on non material aspects of cultures can support the development of methodologies aimed at refining the archaeological interpretation of ancient items technologies rituals settlements and even landscape The volume includes a series of new approaches that can foster the dialogue between archaeology and anthropology in the domain of the intangible knowledge of rural and urban communities The role of ethnoarchaeology in the study of the intangible heritage is so far largely underexplored and there is a considerable lack of ethnoarchaeological studies explicitly focused on the less tangible evidence of present and past societies Fresh case studies will revitalize the theoretical debate around ethnoarchaeology and its applicability in the archaeological and heritage research in the new millennium Over the past decade intangible has become a key word in anthropological research and in heritage management Archaeological theories and methods regarding the explorations of the meaning and the significance of artifacts resources and settlement patterns are increasingly focusing on non material evidence Due to its peculiar characteristics ethnoarchaeology can effectively foster the development of the study of the intangible cultural heritage of living societies and highlight its relevance to the study of those of the past

Precolumbian Water Management Lisa Joyce Lucero,Barbara W. Fash,2006-11-30 Among ancient Mesoamerican and Southwestern peoples water was as essential as maize for sustenance and was a driving force in the development of complex society Control of water shaped the political economic and religious landscape of the ancient Americas yet it is often overlooked in Precolumbian studies Now one volume offers the latest thinking on water systems and their place within the ancient physical and mental language of the region Precolumbian Water Management examines water management from both economic and symbolic perspectives Water management facilities settlement patterns shrines and water related imagery associated with civic ceremonial and residential architecture provide evidence that water systems pervade all aspects of ancient society Through analysis of such data the contributors seek to combine an understanding of imagery and the religious aspects of water with its functional components thereby presenting a unified perspective of how water was conceived used and represented in ancient greater Mesoamerica The collection boasts broad chronological and geographical coverage from the irrigation networks of Teotihuacan to the use of ritual water technology at Casas Grandes that shows how procurement and storage systems were adapted to local conditions The articles consider the mechanisms that were used to build upon the sacredness of water to enhance political authority through time and space and show that water was not merely an essential natural resource but an important spiritual one as well and that its manipulation was socially far more complex than might appear at first glance As these papers reveal an understanding of materials associated with water can contribute much to the ways that archaeologists study ancient cultural systems Precolumbian Water Management underscores the importance of water management research and the need to include it in archaeological projects of all types

Islamicate societies about fundamental questions of how we think and write about the intellectual and technological past in cultures to which we do not belong any longer or never were a member of These debates are occasioned by the manner in which amateurs have taken bits and pieces from our academic narratives and those of our predecessors stripped them of their richness in detail and their often agonizing efforts to interpret these details and rearranged them in simplifying and often misguided fashion as outdated stories about glory success priority and progress Our texts are accompanied by reflections of professional curators and museum directors about the difficulties of translating academic research into representations that attract different groups of visitors They are followed by experiences in northern Europe with Islamophobic adversaries of any narrative about Muslim contributions to the sciences medicine and technologies and in one of the Gulf States with alleged reformers of the political economic and educational landscape of the sheikhdom and their use of such amateurish narratives for blocking efforts of critical questioning of such self congratulatory representations
