House David W. Rohde,2010-07-15 Since the Second World War congressional parties have been characterized as declining in strength and influence Research has generally attributed this decline to policy conflicts within parties to growing electoral independence of members and to the impact of the congressional reforms of the 1970s Yet the 1980s witnessed a strong resurgence of parties and party leadership especially in the House of Representatives Offering a concise and compelling explanation of the causes of this resurgence David W Rohde argues that a realignment of electoral forces led to a reduction of sectional divisions within the parties particularly between the northern and southern Democrats and to increased divergence between the parties on many important issues He challenges previous findings by asserting that congressional reform contributed to rather than restrained the increase of partisanship Among the Democrats reforms siphoned power away from conservative and autocratic committee chairs and put control of those committees in the hands of Democratic committee caucuses strengthening party leaders and making both party and committee leaders responsible to rank and file Democrats Electoral changes increased the homogeneity of House Democrats while institutional reforms reduced the influence of dissident members on a consensus in the majority party Rohde s accessible analysis provides a detailed discussion of the goals of the congressional reformers the increased consensus among Democrats and its reinforcement by their caucus the Democratic leadership s use of expanded powers to shape the legislative agenda and the responses of House Republicans He also addresses the changes in the relationship between the House majority and the president during the Carter and Reagan administrations and analyzes the legislative consequences of the partisan resurgence A readable systematic synthesis of the many complex factors that fueled the recent resurgence of partisanship Parties and Leaders in the Postreform House is ideal for course use Including a Symposium on Mary Morgan Luca Fiorito,Scott
