Parent Involvement In The Home School And Community:

Parents, Their Children, And Schools James S. Coleman, 2018-10-08 This book examines the resources available to parents and the actions parents can take to further their children's education. It is the first study of the subject based on major survey data drawing from the National Education Longitudinal Study of 1988, a national survey of 26,000 eighth graders, their parents, teachers, and school administrators. The authors explore several important debates including the extent to which parental involvement can mitigate the constraints of poverty for minorities and disadvantaged students, school choice, and equality of educational opportunity, and the effects that school-sponsored activities involving parents have on educational performance. Parental involvement with children at home, in school, and in the community is one of the most important factors in educational success. Yet we know very little about the most effective approaches to parental intervention. Moreover, not all parents have the same resources or opportunities to act on the educational expectations they have for their children. This book examines the resources available to parents and the actions parents can take to further their children's education. It is the first study of the subject based on major survey data drawing from the National Education Longitudinal Study of 1988, a national survey of 26,000 eighth graders, their parents, teachers, and school administrators. The authors explore several important debates including the extent to which parental involvement can mitigate the constraints of poverty for minorities and disadvantaged students, school choice, and equality of educational opportunity, and the effects that school-sponsored activities involving parents have on educational performance. Certain to change the thinking of educators and policymakers, this book is essential reading for scholars and parents as well. Parent Involvement in the Home, School, and Community George S. Morrison, 1978 Abstract There are many reasons why parents are becoming more aware of school, community, and government efforts to establish a better environment for their children: greater knowledge of good learning conditions, greater need, especially on the part of handicapped youngsters, to adapt to a complex world, social and cultural changes such as the civil rights movement and student activism, federal and state legislation, and a desire to feel some degree of control over the direction a child's life takes. Parent involvement in development programs is seen as beneficial to the child, the parent, and the program. Some of the programs examined are the Brookline Early Education Project, the Mobile Van Library, and the Home Start Program. Parent involvement can be encouraged by a program home visitation specialist. Parental attitudes are of great importance in molding children's outlook. Home, School, and Community Collaboration Kathy B. Grant, Julie A.
