Decades of research have demonstrated that the parent child dyad and the environment of the family which includes all primary caregivers are at the foundation of children's well being and healthy development. From birth children are learning and rely on parents and the other caregivers in their lives to protect and care for them. The impact of parents may never be greater than during the earliest years of life when a child's brain is rapidly developing and when nearly all of her or his experiences are created and shaped by parents and the family environment. Parents help children build and refine their knowledge and skills charting a trajectory for their health and well being during childhood and beyond. The experience of parenting also impacts parents themselves. For instance parenting can enrich and give focus to parents' lives, generate stress or calm and create any number of emotions including feelings of happiness, sadness, fulfillment and anger. Parenting of young children today takes place in the context of significant ongoing developments. These include a rapidly growing body of science on early childhood, increases in funding for programs and services for families, changing demographics of the U.S. population and greater diversity of family structure. Additionally, parenting is increasingly being shaped by technology and increased access to information about parenting. Parenting Matters identifies parenting knowledge, attitudes and practices associated with positive developmental outcomes in children ages 0-8, universal preventive and targeted strategies used in a variety of settings that have been effective with parents of young children and that support the identified knowledge, attitudes and practices, and barriers to and facilitators for parents' use of practices that lead to healthy child outcomes as well as their participation in effective programs and services. This report makes recommendations directed at an array of stakeholders for promoting the wide scale adoption of effective programs and services for parents and on areas that warrant further research to inform policy and practice. It is meant to serve as a roadmap for the future of parenting policy research and practice in the United States.

Parenting an Adult with Disabilities or Special Needs Peggy Lou

MORGAN, 2009-01-22 Every parent of a child with disabilities knows just how overwhelming and frustrating it can be. When these children enter adulthood the difficulties can become even greater. Many parents are tempted to keep their children at home believing that they will be safer and happier under their care. But adults with special needs deserve the same chance at a happy life as everyone else. As the mother of an adult child with disabilities Peggy Lou Morgan has years of experience dealing with the challenges these adults face every day. She believes that the most loving thing parents can do for their children is to prepare them to leave home in a way that works best for them. In Parenting an Adult with Disabilities or Special Needs she gives parents invaluable advice on teaching their adult child to be a self advocate, helping their child cope with relationships, helping their child find a good vocational program, finding an apartment and a roommate, understanding government programs that can help their children while they become more independent. Compassionate and thorough this guide will help readers to ensure that their children leave the nest with confidence and joy.

Parenting Children with

Learning Disabilities Jane Utley Adelizzi, Diane B. Goss, 2001-04-30 In a straightforward and empathetic tone Adelizzi and Goss sensitively offer support to parents of children with learning disabilities who wish to see their children grow to their full potential While juggling the complex expectations imposed upon them parents often combat confusion anger fear sadness and frustration This book will help diffuse these overwhelming feelings empowering parents with the ability to provide the academic and personal support their children need to thrive Adelizzi and Goss who contribute to a unique and highly successful collegiate program for adults with LD ADD demystify the very fuzzy world of LD terminology and theory and clarify the complicated process of diagnosis and treatment They shed light on the way children and adolescents with learning disabilities function in the home environment in social relationships and at school Parents will find new understanding and hope as the authors with the collective voice of parents and children who deal with LD every day lead them through the maze of issues they must confront
