The Implementation, Evaluation, and Refinement of the Home-school-community Relations Interaction Model Marjorie Lynn Karges, 1977 Parents and Schools William W. Cutler, 2015-05-01 Who holds ultimate authority for the education of America's children: teachers or parents? Although the relationship between home and school has changed dramatically over the decades, William Cutler's fascinating history argues that it has always been a political one, and his book uncovers for the first time how and why the balance of power has shifted over time. Starting with parental dominance in the mid-nineteenth century, Cutler chronicles how schools' growing bureaucratization and professionalization allowed educators to gain increasing control over the schooling and lives of the children they taught. Central to his story is the role of parent-teacher associations, which helped transform an adversarial relationship into a collaborative one. Yet parents have also been controlled by educators through PTAs, leading to the perception that they are company unions. Cutler shows how, in the 1920s and 1930s, schools expanded their responsibility for children's well-being outside the classroom. These efforts sowed the seeds for later conflict as schools came to be held accountable for solving society's problems. Finally, he brings the reader into recent decades in which a breakdown of trust, racial tension, and parents' rights have taken the story full circle, with parents and schools once again at odds. Cutler's book is an invaluable guide to understanding how parent-teacher cooperation, which is essential for our children's educational success, might be achieved.

Family Involvement in Children's Education Janie Funkhouser, 1999-02 Describes how some schools and their communities have overcome key barriers, finding the time, increasing their information about each other, bridging school-family differences, improving schools, and tapping external supports to strengthen school-family partnerships. Successful partnerships require the sustained mutual collaboration and support of school staffs and families at home and at school. Business or community groups can also help schools and families to work together. This book is based on case studies of 20 successful education programs around the country. They include elementary and secondary schools and districtwide programs.
