Parenting Matters National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Board on Children, Youth, and Families, Committee on Supporting the Parents of Young Children, 2016-11-21

Decades of research have demonstrated that the parent child dyad and the environment of the family which includes all primary caregivers are at the foundation of children's well being and healthy development. From birth children are learning and rely on parents and the other caregivers in their lives to protect and care for them. The impact of parents may never be greater than during the earliest years of life when a child's brain is rapidly developing and when nearly all of her or his experiences are created and shaped by parents and the family environment. Parents help children build and refine their knowledge and skills charting a trajectory for their health and well being during childhood and beyond. The experience of parenting also impacts parents themselves. For instance parenting can enrich and give focus to parents' lives generate stress or calm and create any number of emotions including feelings of happiness sadness fulfillment and anger. Parenting of young children today takes place in the context of significant ongoing developments. These include a rapidly growing body of science on early childhood increases in funding for programs and services for families changing demographics of the U.S. population and greater diversity of family structure. Additionally parenting is increasingly being shaped by technology and increased access to information about parenting. Parenting Matters identifies parenting knowledge attitudes and practices associated with positive developmental outcomes in children ages 0-8 universal preventive and targeted strategies used in a variety of settings that have been effective with parents of young children and that support the identified knowledge attitudes and practices and barriers to and facilitators for parents' use of practices that lead to healthy child outcomes as well as their participation in effective programs and services. This report makes recommendations directed at an array of stakeholders for promoting the wide scale adoption of effective programs and services for parents and on areas that warrant further research to inform policy and practice. It is meant to serve as a roadmap for the future of parenting policy research and practice in the United States.

Parents and Schools William W. Cutler, 2000-06-15

Who holds ultimate authority for the education of America's children teachers or parents? Although the relationship between home and school has changed dramatically over the decades William Cutler's fascinating history argues that it has always been a political one and his book uncovers for the first time how and why the balance of power has shifted over time Starting with parental dominance in the mid nineteenth century Cutler chronicles how schools growing bureaucratization and professionalization allowed educators to gain increasing control over the schooling and lives of the children they taught Central to his story is the role of parent teacher associations which helped transform an adversarial relationship into a collaborative one Yet parents have also been controlled by educators through PTAs leading to the perception that they are company unions Cutler shows how in the 1920s and 1930s schools expanded their responsibility for children s well being outside the classroom These efforts sowed the seeds for later conflict as schools came to be held accountable for solving society s problems Finally he brings the reader into recent decades in which a breakdown of trust racial tension and parents rights have taken the story full circle with parents and schools once again at odds Cutler s book is an invaluable guide to understanding how parent teacher cooperation which is essential for our children s educational success might be achieved

Beyranevand, 2021-02-03 How to build productive relationships in math education I wasn t taught this way I can t help my child These are common refrains from today s parents and guardians who are often overwhelmed confused worried and frustrated about how to best support their children with what they see as the new math The problem has been compounded by the shift to more distance learning in response to a global pandemic Partnering With Parents in Elementary School Math provides educators with long overdue guidance on how to productively partner and communicate with families about their children's mathematics learning. It includes reproducible surveys, letters, and planning documents that can be used to improve the home-school relationship, which in turn helps students, parents, teachers, and education leaders alike. Readers will find guidance on how to understand and empathize with what fuels parents' anxieties and concerns, align as a school and set parents' expectations about what math instruction their children will experience, and how it will help them. Communicate clearly and productively with parents about their students' progress, strengths, and needs in math. Run informative and fun family events to support homework. Coach parents to portray a productive disposition about math in front of their children. Educators, families, and students are best served when proactive, productive, and healthy relationships have been developed with each other and with the realities of today's math education. This guide shows how these relationships can be built.

Confident Parents, Confident Kids Jennifer S. Miller, 2019-11-05 Confident Parents, Confident Kids lays out an approach for helping parents and the kids they love hone their emotional intelligence so that they can make wise choices, connect and communicate well with others even when patience is thin, and become socially conscious and confident human beings. How do we raise a happy, confident kid? And how can we be confident that our parenting is preparing our child for success? Our confidence develops from understanding and having a mastery over our emotions, aka emotional intelligence, and helping our children do the same. Like learning to play a musical instrument, we can fine-tune our ability to skillfully react to those crazy, wonderful, big feelings that naturally arise from our child's constant growth and changes, moving from chaos to harmony. We want our children to trust that they can conquer any challenge with hard work and persistence, that they can love boundlessly, that they will find their unique sense of purpose, and they will act wisely in a complex world. This book shows you how. With author and educator Jennifer Miller as your supportive guide, you'll learn the lies we've been told about emotions, how they shape our choices, and how we can reshape our parenting decisions in better alignment with our deepest values. How to identify the temperaments your child was born with so you can support those tendencies rather than fight them; how to align your biggest hopes and dreams for your kids with specific skills that can be practiced along with new research to support those powerful connections about each age and stage your child goes through and the range of learning opportunities available; how to identify and manage those big emotions that only the parenting process can bring out in us; and how to model emotional intelligence for your children; how to deal with the emotions and influences of your child's many outside individuals and communities who directly impact your child's life, including school, the digital world, extended family, neighbors, and friends. Raising confident, centered, happy kids while feeling the same way about yourself is possible with Confident Parents, Confident Kids. Intersectional Pedagogy Kim A.
