such as wood manure or crop residues is heated in a closed container with little or no available air. It can be used to improve agriculture and the environment in several ways and its stability in soil and superior nutrient retention properties make it an ideal soil amendment to increase crop yields. In addition to this, biochar sequestration in combination with sustainable biomass production can be carbon negative and therefore used to actively remove carbon dioxide from the atmosphere with major implications for mitigation of climate change. Biochar production can also be combined with bioenergy production through the use of the gases that are given off in the pyrolysis process. This book is the first to synthesize the expanding research literature on this topic. The book's interdisciplinary approach, which covers engineering, environmental sciences, agricultural sciences, economics, and policy, is a vital tool at this stage of biochar technology development. This comprehensive overview of current knowledge will be of interest to advanced students, researchers, and professionals in a wide range of disciplines.
