The Work Sharing Program in Canada David M. Gray, 2000 Work Sharing a program run by Human Resources Development Canada offers help to employees who would otherwise be caught in a layoff of at least three months Under the program the employer signs an agreement whereby it can reduce its work week and its pay commensurately while the federal government compensates workers at the same replacement rate it would pay if they were receiving conventional unemployment insurance UI This study attempts to determine whether the program contributes to economic well being in a fashion that the conventional UI program does not It discusses the advantages drawbacks of subsidized short term compensation programs based on a literature survey drawn primarily from the experience in Germany Belgium France and the United States This is followed by an analysis and evaluation of the Canadian program Finally policy recommendations are made for improving the outcomes associated with the program Perspectives on Labour and Income, 1997 L'école

Autobiographique autant qu'historique cet ouvrage pousse la r flexion bien au del de la simple anecdote sur le parcours

somme toute unique de son auteur Celui ci fut recteur d'une des plus grandes universités de recherche du Canada pendant sept ans et professeur de sciences économiques pendant 35 ans Il témoigne de plusieurs questions primordiales sur la place de l'université dans notre société outre celles de l'éducation de la recherche ou du leadership Ce faisant il passe au crible le fonctionnement de cette organisation complexe en analysant ses liens nécessaires avec les partenaires externes et les fonctions souvent méconnues de chacun de ses acteurs Il explore au détour les notions de philanthropie dans un contexte francophone de syndicalisme ou d'engagement envers l'excellence crits sur un bon personnel mais gardant une saine distance envers son sujet ses souvenirs et ses réflexions viennent enrichir le patrimoine historique qu'il nous offre en offrant un regard inédit sur l'une de ses institutions les plus fondamentales
