Participatory Communication For Social Change:

The Handbook of Development Communication and Social Change Karin Gwinn Wilkins, Thomas Tufte, Rafael Obregon, 2014-01-22 This valuable resource offers a wealth of practical and conceptual guidance to all those engaged in struggles for social justice around the world. It explains in accessible language and painstaking detail how to deploy and to understand the tools of media and communication in advancing the goals of social, cultural and political change. A stand out reference on a vital topic of primary international concern with a rising profile in communications and media research programs. Multinational editorial team and global contributors. Covers the history of the field as well as integrating and reconceptualising its diverse perspectives and approaches. Provides a fully formed framework of understanding and identifies likely future developments. Features a wealth of insights into the critical role of digital media in development communication and social change. Communication for Development and Social Change Jan (editor) Servaes, 2013 Participatory Communication for Social Change Jan Servaes, Thomas L Jacobson, Shirley A White, 1996-08-05 Participation has been the emerging theme of debate in the field of development. However participatory communication and the impact of setting goals for social change through participatory development have not been fully discussed in the literature. An exciting addition to this area. Participatory Communication for Social Change carefully examines the enormous potential of participation in development. With an introduction that stresses the importance of cultural identity and democratization at all levels the volume presents theoretical perspectives in relation to policy issues and political ideologies. It also explores diverse methodological perspectives and applies this discussion to five significant case studies that articulate specific experiences in interfacing theory and practice. Each contributor focuses on the importance of participatory communication in third world development and stimulates new thinking about the theory and reality of participation particularly the practical realities of applying theory at grassroots levels. This volume is a thought provoking contribution to the continuing process of understanding participation in the field of development communication. Participatory Communication for Social Change will be of primary interest to development practitioners, funding agencies, field workers and researchers in development communication and sociology. Communicating for Social Change Mohan Jyoti Dutta, Dazzelyn Baltazar Zapata, 2018-12-05 The book covers the trajectories and trends in social change communication engaging the key theoretical debates on communication and social change. Attending to the concepts of communication and social change that emerge from and across the global margins the book works toward offering theoretical and methodological lessons that de-center the dominant constructions of communication and social change. The chapters in the book delve into the interplays of academic, activist, community negotiations in communication for social change and the ways in which these negotiations offer entry points into transformative communication processes of social change. Moreover a number of chapters in the book attend to the ways in which Asian articulations of social change are situated at the intersections of culture, structure and agency.

Chapters in the book are extended versions of research presented at the conference on Communicating Social Change Intersections of Theory and Praxis held at the National University of Singapore in 2016 organized under the umbrella of the Center for Culture Centered Approach to Research and Evaluation CARE Participatory Communication Thomas Tufte, Paolo Mefalopulos, 2009-07-02 What do we mean when we say participatory communication What are the practical implications of working with participatory communication strategies in development and social change processes What experiences exist in practice that documents that participatory communication adds value to a development project or programme The aim of this user guide on participatory communication is to provide answers to some of these questions Many communication practitioners and development workers face obstacles and challenges in their practical work A participatory communication strategy offers a very specific perspective on how to articulate social processes decision making processes and any change process for that matter Participatory approaches are nothing new However what is new is the proliferation of institutions especially governmental but also non governmental that seek participatory approaches in their development initiative This guide seeks to provide perspectives tools and experiences regarding how to go about it with participatory communication strategies It is conceived as a guide that hopefully can be of relevance and utility for development workers in the field It is targeted at both at government and their officials World Bank staff and at civil society

Communication for Social Change Anthology Alfonso Gumucio Dagron, Thomas Tufte, 2006 Contains nearly 200 readings published between 1927 and 2005 in English or translated from other languages on the historical roots and pioneering thinking regarding communication for social change Covers a variety of topics including the radio tv and other mass communication information and communication technology the digital gap the formation of an information society national information policies participatory decision making communication of development pedagogy and entertainment education HIV AIDS communication for prevention etc Global Perspectives on NGO Communication for Social Change

Giuliana Sorce, 2021-11-03 This book examines the central role media and communication play in the activities of Non Governmental Organizations NGOs around the globe how NGOs communicate with key publics engage stakeholders target political actors enable input from civil society and create participatory opportunities An international line up of authors first discuss communication practices strategies and media uses by NGOs providing insights into the specifics of NGO programs for social change goals and reveal particular sets of tactics NGOs commonly employ The book then presents a set of case studies of NGO organizing from all over the world ranging from Sudan via Brazil to China to illustrate the particular contexts that make NGO advocacy necessary while also highlighting successful initiatives to illuminate the important spaces NGOs occupy in civil society This comprehensive and wide ranging exploration of global NGO communication will be of great interest to scholars across communication studies media studies public relations organizational studies political science and development studies while offering accessible pieces for practitioners and organizers Evaluating Communication for Development June Lennie, Jo Tacchi, 2013-02-11 Evaluating Communication for Development presents a comprehensive framework for evaluating communication for development C4D This framework combines the latest thinking from a number of fields in new ways It critiques dominant instrumental accountability based approaches to development and evaluation and offers an alternative holistic participatory mixed methods approach based on systems and complexity thinking and other key concepts It maintains a focus on power gender and other differences and social norms The authors have designed the framework as a way to focus on achieving sustainable social change and to continually improve and develop C4D initiatives The benefits and rigour of this approach are supported by examples and case studies from a number of action research and evaluation capacity development projects undertaken by the authors over the past fifteen years Building on current arguments within the fields of C4D and development the authors reinforce the case for effective communication being a central and vital component of participatory forms of development something that needs to be appreciated by decision makers They also consider ways of increasing the effectiveness of evaluation capacity development from grassroots to management level in the development context an issue of growing importance to improving the quality effectiveness and utilisation of monitoring and evaluation studies in this field The book includes a critical review of the key approaches methodologies and methods that are considered effective for planning evaluation assessing the outcomes of C4D and engaging in continuous learning This rigorous book is of immense theoretical and practical value to students scholars and professionals researching or working in development communication and media applied anthropology and evaluation and program planning

Communication, Culture and Social Change Mohan Dutta, 2020-06-30 Drawing on the culture centered approach CCA this book re imagines culture as a site for resisting the neocolonial framework of neoliberal governmentality Culture emerged in the 20th Century

as a conceptual tool for resisting the hegemony of West centric interventions in development disrupting the assumptions that form the basis of development This turn to culture offered radical possibilities for decolonizing social change but in response neocolonial development institutions incorporated culture into their strategic framework while simultaneously deploying political and economic power to silence transformative threads This rise of culture as development corresponded with the global rise of neo liberal governmentality incorporating culture as a tool for globally reproducing the logic of capital Using examples of transformative social change interventions this book emphasizes the role of culture as a site for resisting capitalism and imagining rights based sustainable and socialist futures In particular it attends to culture as the basis for socialist organizing in activist and party politics In doing so Culture Participation and Social Change offers a framework of inter linkage between Marxist analyses of capital and cultural analyses of colonialism It concludes with an anti colonial framework that re imagines the academe as a site of activist interventions
