Participatory Communication Shirley A. White, K. Sadanandan Nair, Joseph R. Ascroft, 1994-01 Participatory Communication Shirley A. White, 1994 Perspectives on Development Communication K Sadanandan Nair, Shirley A White, 1994-03-02 Nair and White have devised a model best suited for developing countries like India where a unidirectional flow of information has hitherto considerably hindered the development process The papers included in this volume will be useful to students and research scholars particularly in the field of communication The strength of the volume lies in the variety of viewpoints presented from the economic development perspective The Indian Journal of Social Science Current thinking in development communication has shifted from the dominant paradigm of the diffusion of innovation to a less top down approach acknowledging the importance of a micro level focus with coherent linkages to the macro level It is now widely accepted that the development process requires full participation of the people if there is to be a commitment to development decisions development communication can play a decisive role in facilitating this wider involvement The 18 original essays presented in this volume offer diverse viewpoints regarding the need to rethink the effectiveness of existing development models and processes The new model of communication posited by the editors of this book addresses the transition from traditional governance by ascendancy to a more grassroots orientation in development decision making The underlying concern is to reconceptualize development communication Perspectives on Development Communication provides a thoughtful and provocative exposition of both the established and forthcoming approaches Participatory Communication Thomas Tufte, Paolo Mefalopulos, 2009-07-02 What do we mean when we say participatory communication What are the practical implications of working with participatory communication strategies in development and social change processes What experiences exist in practice that documents that participatory communication adds value to a development project or programme The aim of this user guide on participatory communication is to provide answers to some of these questions Many communication practitioners and development workers face obstacles and challenges in their practical work A participatory communication strategy offers a very specific perspective on how to articulate social processes decision making processes and any change process for that matter Participatory approaches are nothing new However what is new is the proliferation of institutions especially governmental but also non governmental that seek participatory approaches in their development initiative This guide seeks to provide perspectives tools and experiences regarding how to go about it with participatory communication strategies It is conceived as a guide that hopefully can be of relevance and utility for development workers in the field It is targeted at both at government and their officials World Bank staff and at civil society alternative holistic participatory mixed methods approach based on systems and complexity thinking and other key concepts. It maintains a focus on power, gender and other differences and social norms. The authors have designed the framework as a way to focus on achieving sustainable social change and to continually improve and develop C4D initiatives. The benefits and rigour of this approach are supported by examples and case studies from a number of action research and evaluation capacity development projects undertaken by the authors over the past fifteen years. Building on current arguments within the fields of C4D and development, the authors reinforce the case for effective communication being a central and vital component of participatory forms of development, something that needs to be appreciated by decision makers. They also consider ways of increasing the effectiveness of evaluation capacity development from grassroots to management level in the development context, an issue of growing importance to improving the quality, effectiveness and utilisation of monitoring and evaluation studies in this field. The book includes a critical review of the key approaches, methodologies and methods that are considered effective for planning, evaluation, assessing the outcomes of C4D and engaging in continuous learning. This rigorous book is of immense theoretical and practical value to students, scholars and professionals researching or working in development communication and media applied anthropology and evaluation and program planning.

Media and Global Change Thomas Hylland Eriksen, 2005      Development Communication, 2017      Globalization, Development and the Mass Media Colin Sparks, 2007-11-20. Globalization and the Mass Media gives a comprehensive and critical account of the theoretical changes in communication studies from the early theories of development communication through to the contemporary critiques of globalization. It examines two main currents of thought. Firstly, the ways in which the media can be used to effect change and development. It traces the evolution of thinking from attempts to spread modernity by way of using the media through to alternative perspectives based on encouraging participation in development communication. Secondly, the elaboration of the theory of media imperialism, the criticisms that it provoked and its replacement as the dominant theory of international communication by globalization.

Communicating Development with Communities Linje Manyozo, 2017-07-14. Development theory and practice are often taught in a manner that strips them of their historical context and obscures alternative intellectual assumptions and critical frameworks. This prevents students from acquiring a holistic understanding of the world and consequently, when it comes to development practice, most lack the skills to live and engage with people. It has become crucial to properly consider what it means to conceive and implement participatory development out in the field and not just in the boardroom. Building on the work of Robert Chambers and Arturo Escobar, Communicating Development with Communities is an empirically grounded critical reflection on how the development industry defines, imagines and constructs development at the implementation level. Unpacking the dominant syntax in the theory and practice of development, the book advocates a move towards relational and indigenous models of living that celebrate local ontologies, spirituality, economies of solidarity and community. It investigates how subaltern voices are produced and appropriated and how well meaning experts can easily become oppressors The book propounds a pedagogy of listening as a pathway that offers a space for interest groups to collaboratively curate meaningful development with and alongside communities This is a valuable resource for academics and practitioners in the fields of Development Studies Communication for Development Communication for Social Change Social Anthropology Economic Development and Public Policy Foreword by Robin Mansell

Participatory Communication for Social Change Jan Servaes, Thomas L Jacobson, Shirley A White, 1996-08-05 Participation has been the emerging theme of debate in the field of development However participatory communication and the impact of setting goals for social change through participatory development have not been fully discussed in the literature An exciting addition to this area Participatory Communication for Social Change carefully examines the enormous potential of participation in development With an introduction that stresses the importance of cultural identity and democratization at all levels the volume presents theoretical perspectives in relation to policy issues and political ideologies It also explores diverse methodological perspectives and applies this discussion to five significant case studies that articulate specific experiences in interfacing theory and practice Each contributor focuses on the importance of participatory communication in third world development and stimulates new thinking about the theory and reality of participation particularly the practical realities of applying theory at grassroots levels This volume is a thought provoking contribution to the continuing process of understanding participation in the field of development communication Participatory Communication for Social Change will be of primary interest to development practitioners funding agencies field workers and researchers in development development communication and sociology
