Electronic Databases and Publishing Albert Henderson, 2018-01-18 The true pioneers in electronic publishing put their bibliographic databases on tape and online in the 1960s Nearly all of them had long experience with compiling information for distribution in printed form and a strong market connection As a result of Soviet advances in science and space technology American government support for information science and academic libraries flowed freely for a little over a decade making possible tremendous advances in technology in retrieval techniques and in sophisticated coverage Advances in information technology and market conditions have encouraged many more participants to underwrite the development of databases that now extend into the arts social sciences business and popular interests These essays show how production statistics accompanied by statements of editorial coverage provide a fairly accurate reflection of output of many of the major disciplinary bibliographic databases The urgent priority of information resources in the 1960s has encouraged comprehensive servicing of the formal research literature as published in journals and monographs Authors have counted subject words languages origins types of publication and so on over several decades This volume also includes articles on some databases that are not strictly bibliographic such as the CMG database of college courses which illuminates some of the changes in college textbook publishing Information seekers will find the many tables of practical use as guidance to what and how much may be found within each database Analysts of publishing of science policy and of higher education will find information relevant to expenditures human resources and other indicators of education research and technology activity

Krüger, G. Müller, 2012-12-06 The present volume and volume I Hector New Ways in Education and Research present the results of HECTOR the four year cooperation project between the Univer sity of Karlsruhe and IBM Germany represented by the European Networking Center and Scientific Center in Heidelberg as well as IBM Research in Riischlikon The pro ject was started in spring 1984 and will end in April 1988 with a congress This congress addresses the scientific community to present experiences and results with a program of lectures and demonstrations The HECTOR Project has two major aspects the first is to explore new ways in uni versity education The second aspect of HECTOR comprises basic research work to develop new technological concepts for the establishment of computer communication networks supporting academic research and education in all disciplines The underlying concept is that now and in the future computer software and commu nication systems which are required for the broad range of scientific and educational tasks will be of different technical orientation and made by different manufacturers. These diverse systems will however need to coexist and cooperate side by side. Today in most cases different hardware and software architectures of different manufacturers prevent a scientist or student from choosing freely the computer and software which offers the best alternative for solving his or her current problem. The mutual cooperation of the academic users is also hindered substantially by the many incompatibilities present. The users' future is therefore transparency in a heterogeneous environment.
