Past Present No145 November 1994:

A Taste for Comfort and Status Christine Adams, 2000-01-01 The Lamothes were an ordinary family in eighteenth century Bordeaux Well to do and well respected by their neighbors they were local notables whose private and public lives suggest the importance of family kin and friendship networks professional activities and cultural interests as well as a desire to serve the public good In this portrait of the Lamothes Christine Adams explores the development of middle class identity among urban professionals and reconsiders the role of this social group in the coming French Revolution The most striking feature of this family history is that it is based on more than three hundred personal letters that circulated among the Lamothes parents and seven siblings over a period of twenty five years Such a collection is rare for this period and Adams makes the most of it Her study lends remarkable texture to provincial middle class life She weaves these letters into every aspect of the Lamothes experience professional literary intellectual social and civic She demonstrates a sustained mobilization of all family skills and resources to maintain the status of the males of the family and preserve rather than risk the family's emotional and material stability While their conservative lifestyle suggests that the Lamothes were not revolutionary they were nonetheless part of the bourgeoisie Adams thus taps into a potent debate about middle class consciousness and identity in the eighteenth century arguing against those historians who doubt that such a social class existed in France before 1789

America Under the Hammer Ellen Hartigan-O'Connor, 2024-11-12 Reveals how through auctions early Americans learned capitalism As the first book length study of auctions in early America America Under the Hammer follows this ubiquitous but largely overlooked institution to reveal how across the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries price became an accepted expression of value From the earliest days of colonial conquest auctions put Native land and human beings up for bidding alongside material goods normalizing new economic practices that turned social relations into economic calculations and eventually became recognizable as nineteenth century American capitalism Starting in the eighteenth century neighbors collectively turned speculative value into economic facts in the form of concrete prices for specific items thereby establishing ideas about fair exchange in their communities This consensus soon fractured during the Revolutionary War state governments auctioned loyalist property weaponizing local group participation in pricing and distribution to punish political enemies By the early nineteenth century suspicion that auction outcomes were determined by manipulative auctioneers prompted politicians and satirists to police the boundaries of what counted as economic exchange and for whose benefit the economy operated Women at auctions as commodities bidders or beneficiaries became a focal point for gendering economic value itself By the 1830s as abolitionists attacked the public sale of enslaved men women and children auctions had enshrined a set of economic ideas that any entity could be coded as property and priced through competition that have become commonsense understandings all too seldom challenged In contrast to histories focused on banks currencies or plantations America Under the Hammer highlights an institution that integrated market community and household in ways that put gender race and social bonds at the center of ideas about economic worth Women and men enslaved and free are active participants in this story rather than bystanders and their labor judgments and bodies define the resulting contours of the American economy

The Deadly Ethnic Riot Donald L. Horowitz, 2023-11-15 Donald L Horowitz's comprehensive consideration of the structure and dynamics of ethnic violence is the first full scale comparative study of what the author terms the deadly ethnic riot an intense sudden lethal attack by civilian members of one ethnic group on civilian members of another ethnic group Serious frequent and destabilizing these events result in large numbers of casualties Horowitz examines approximately 150 such riots in about fifty countries mainly in Asia Africa and the former Soviet Union as well as fifty control cases With its deep and thorough scholarship incisive analysis and profound insights The Deadly Ethnic Riot will become the definitive work on its subject Furious and sadistic the riot is nevertheless directed against a precisely specified class of targets and conducted with considerable circumspection Horowitz scrutinizes target choices participants and organization the timing and supporting conditions for the violence the nature of the events that precede the riot the prevalence of atrocities during the violence the location and diffusion of riots and the aims and effects of riot behavior He finds that the deadly ethnic riot is a highly patterned but emotional event that tends to occur during times of political uncertainty He also discusses the crucial role of rumor in triggering riots the surprisingly limited role of deliberate organization and the striking lack of remorse exhibited by participants Horowitz writes clearly and eloquently without compromising the complexity of his subject With impressive analytical skill he takes up the important challenge of explaining phenomena that are at once passionate and calculative Donald L Horowitz's comprehensive consideration of the structure and dynamics of ethnic violence is the first full scale comparative study of what the author terms the deadly ethnic riot an intense sudden lethal attack by civilian members of one ethnic

Vicarious Consumers Manuel Perez-Garcia, 2016-03-03 The birth of a mass consumer society in western Europe has been the subject of much scholarly debate in recent years In order to come to a further understanding of the issue this book adopts an analytical approach paying special attention to the socio cultural and economic transfers which occur when different commodities are introduced to territories with diverse values and identities In particular it examines the role of merchants and their important influence on consumer decisions describing how they created demand for new necessities in local national and international markets of the western Mediterranean area Through a systematic analysis of probate inventories from southern Spain the study reveals shifts in the patterns of consumption of new goods in urban and rural families underlining a growing interest in new exotic and foreign goods By connecting these local desires aspirations and choices to a global movement in which human and material capital circulated trans continentally broader patterns of consumption are revealed By observing a southern European society such as Spain where the industrialization process was slower than that in Anglo Saxon territories the book contributes to the on going debates about industrious revolution and trickle down theories and whether both occurred simultaneously or separately The book also helps identify the socio economic forces and agents that prompted the stimulus for new consumer aspirations as well as the cultural consequences that the new modern consumerism brought about
