These parts are as follows: Part I emphasizes on GCP Good Clinical Practices, GLP Good Laboratory Practices, GMP Good Manufacturing Practices, USFDA NDA ANDA, U.S. Food and Drug Administration's New Drug Approval, Abbreviated New Drug Approval, and TQM Total Quality Management. GCP Good Clinical Practices is an international quality standard that is provided by the International Conference on Harmonization (ICH), an international body that defines standards which governments can transpose into regulations for clinical trials involving human subjects. Good Clinical Practice guidelines include protection of human rights as a subject in clinical trial. It also provides assurance of the safety and efficacy of the newly developed compounds. Good Clinical Practice Guidelines include standards on how clinical trials should be conducted, define the roles and responsibilities of clinical trial sponsors, clinical research investigators, and monitors. In the pharmaceutical industry, monitors are often called Clinical Research Associates. GLP Good Laboratory Practices deals with the organization process and conditions under which laboratory studies are planned, performed, monitored, recorded, and reported. GLP practices are intended to promote the quality and validity of test data. Published GLP regulations and guidelines have a significant impact on the daily operation of an analytical laboratory. GMP Good Manufacturing Practices Manufacturing relies on the ability to reproduce exactly a single product hundreds if not thousands of times. To make this possible, guidelines have been drawn up in most countries that are similar to the FDA ones described here that define GMPs. Diagnostic companies, including those manufacturing and distributing biosensors, cannot sell their products for either public or professional use unless they have been approved on the basis of these guidelines.
