Past Imperfect Peter Charles Hoffer, 2007-07-03 Woodrow Wilson a practicing academic historian before he took to politics defined the importance of history A nation which does not know what it was yesterday does not know what it is today He like many men of his generation wanted to impose a version of America's founding identity it was a land of the free and a home of the brave But not the braves Or the slaves Or the disenfranchised women So the history of Wilson's generation omitted a significant proportion of the population in favor of a perspective that was predominantly white male and Protestant That flaw would become a fissure and eventually a schism A new history arose which written in part by radicals and liberals had little use for the noble and the heroic and that rankled many who wanted a celebratory rather than a critical history To this combustible mixture of elements was added the flame of public debate History in the 1990s was a minefield of competing passions political views and prejudices It was dangerous ground and at the end of the decade four of the nation's most respected and popular historians were almost destroyed by it Michael Bellesiles Doris Kearns Goodwin Stephen Ambrose and Joseph Ellis This is their story set against the wider narrative of the writing of America's history It may be as Flaubert put it that Our ignorance of history makes us libel our own times To which he could have added falsify plagiarize and politicize because that's the other story of America's history

Past Imperfect Deborah Turbeville,2009 Past Imperfect encompasses Deborah Turbevilles ground breaking imagery created between 1974 and 1998 This is the work that the photographer herself puts in italics the narrative work which stands at the very center of her oeuvre The photographs themselves with their tension and sense of hidden melodrama weave together the disparate novellas running through the book Many of the images often iconic are recycled from the unlikely medium of fashion photography both published and un published Some fifteen vignettes capture her unique sensibility and elegant aesthetic Each vignette is a series of stills reminding one of films they missed but would have liked to have seen to quote one critic It is an unorthodox vision at once haunting and memorable The characters mostly women interact with their strange elusive environments as anachronisms misplaced out of sync with their time and context A group of Turbevilles favorite actresses and models mostly unknown act as a repertoire cast who interpret these endangered species Mutations in a mannequin workshop statues in a Paris art school automatons in a derelict factory They reveal inner thoughts emotions and a sense of unease There is a sense of fragmented dreams dislocation hallucination a time without boundaries ongoing the past imperfect their original designs      A Descriptive Grammar of Hindko, Panjabi, and Saraiki Elena Bashir, Thomas J.

Connors, 2019-08-19 Hindko Panjabi and Saraiki are three closely related geographically contiguous languages of Pakistan. Together they are the native language of some 125 million people. Panjabi alone ranks among the 15 most widely spoken languages in the world. The Grammar of Hindko Panjabi and Saraiki provides a comparative description of these three language varieties, focusing where possible on the variety of Hindko spoken in Abbottabad, the Panjabi spoken in Lahore, and the Saraiki spoken in Multan. Based on both fieldwork and corpus research, the grammar provides coverage of the phonology, orthography, morphology, and syntax of the language, with extensive exemplification presented in the native Perso-Arabic script along with standard Roman representations and morphological analysis. Written in an accessible style from a basic linguistic theory perspective, this work will be of use to linguistic researchers, language scholars, and students of the languages of Pakistan and South Asia.
