Chesebro, Dale A. Bertelsen, 1998-10-01 For the past 25 years critics of communication have focused on the content and form of verbal and nonverbal communication while for the most part neglecting what traditionally has been considered a technical rather than a critical issue the impact of how messages are produced or formatted in the various media Topics such as the sexual and violent content of television and films the meaning of pornography and the persuasive efforts of advertisers largely have been examined with the use of social science methodologies that ignore the behavioral and message generating implications of specific media systems themselves Filling a significant void in the literature this volume eschews the notion of communication technologies as neutral conduits and instead depicts them as active and creative determinants of meaning In doing so it offers an illuminating examination of the dynamic relationships among communication cognition and social organization Providing a framework for the chapters that follow the first section of the book presents a history of human communication from a technological perspective explores the integral role of communication technologies in everyday life and isolates the ways in which criticism can function as an assessment system Three specific technological cultures that define human communication are identified the oral the literate and the electronic The authors identify structural features and discuss the social implications of each They also provide descriptions interpretations and evaluations of these technological cultures and show how criticism changes when the media of transmission is taken into account The book concludes with a cogent discussion of a range of topics surrounding media criticism such as its pedagogical implications how multiple selves can exist in a world of varied communication technologies the integration of communication technologies and how media studies should be incorporated into the disc

Reengaging the Prospects of Rhetoric Mark J. Porrovecchio, 2010-02-25 Reengaging the Prospects of Rhetoric reanimates the debate over the function and scope of rhetoric Providing a contemporary response to the volume The Prospect of Rhetoric 1971 this volume reconceptualizes that classic work to address the challenges facing the study of rhetoric today With contributions from today's leading rhetorical scholars Reengaging the Prospects of Rhetoric offers response essays to each chapter of the original work Each scholar uses his/her essay as a forum in which to address three questions As a historical document why is this essay important In terms of contemporary theory and/or practice what is the significance of the essay How can the issues raised therein be profitably addressed in the future These provocative engagements suggest that while the study of rhetoric has gained much ground in the intervening decades there is more work to be done to reestablish the primacy of rhetoric in contemporary society This volume provides students and scholars of rhetoric with a strong foundation in the issues that have shaped contemporary rhetorical theory and criticism It offers them an accessible introduction to the challenges facing future iterations of rhetorical theory and criticism As a standalone text or a supplemental resource for undergraduate and graduate courses in the history theory and criticism of rhetoric or contemporary rhetorical theory it will help to shape rhetoric's future role in communication studies and will foster interdisciplinary dialogues about the topic
