Claiming Power Over Life Mark J. Hanson, 2001-10-03 Developments in biotechnology such as cloning and the decoding of the human genome are generating questions and choices that traditionally have fallen within the realm of religion and philosophy the definition of human life human vs divine control of nature the relationship between human and non human life and the intentional manipulation of the mechanisms of life and death In Claiming Power over Life eight contributors challenge policymakers to recognize the value of religious views on biotechnology and discuss how best to integrate the wisdom of the Christian and Jewish traditions into public policy debates Arguing that civic discourse on the subject has been impoverished by an inability to accommodate religious insights productively they identify the ways in which religious thought can contribute to policymaking Likewise the authors challenge religious leaders and scholars to learn about biotechnology address the central issues it raises and participate constructively in the moral debates it engenders The book will be of value to policymakers religious leaders ethicists and all those interested in issues surrounding the intersection of religion and biotechnology policy

Design and Destiny Ronald Cole-Turner, 2008 Scholars discuss the genetic modification of embryonic cells from the viewpoints of traditional Jewish and Christian teaching considering both the possible therapeutic benefits of this technology and moral concerns about its implementation We are approaching the day when advances in biotechnology will allow parents to design a baby with the traits they want The continuing debate over the possibilities of genetic engineering has been spirited but so far largely confined to the realms of bioethics and public policy Design and Destiny approaches the question in religious terms discussing human germline modification the genetic modification of the embryonic cells that become the eggs or sperm of a developing organism from the viewpoints of traditional Christian and Jewish teaching The contributors leading religious scholars and writers call our attention not to technology but to humanity reflecting upon the meaning and destiny of human life in a technological age Many of these scholars argue that religious teaching can support human germline modification implemented for therapeutic reasons although they offer certain moral conditions that must be met The essays offer a surprising variety of opinions including a discussion of Judaism's traditional presumption in favor of medicine an argument that Catholic doctrine could accept germline modification if it is therapeutic for the embryo an argument implying that traditional Christian teaching permits germline modification whether for therapy or enhancement and a classical Protestant view that germline modification should be categorically opposed Contributors Lisa Sowle Cahill Nigel M de S Cameron Ronald Cole Turner Amy Michelle DeBaets Celia Deane Drummond Elliot Dorff H

Procreative Ethics Fritz Oehlschlaeger, 2010-01-01 Procreative Ethics addresses questions at the beginning of life from a point of view that is alternatively philosophical and Christian The author seeks to defend philosophically some positions taken partly on Christian grounds while also trying to make the implications of Christian convictions intelligible to those who do not necessarily share those convictions The author positions himself neither as a moral friend nor moral stranger preferring instead the role of moral acquaintance to his audience From that position the goal is to find areas of fruitful agreement while clarifying differences that may lead to truer reconciliations further on in the conversation The book opens with an attempted natural law defense of artificial contraception devotes four chapters to criticism of current defenses of abortion and then takes up in six remaining chapters such matters as genetic enhancement of children the justice or injustice of genetic revision the harm conundrum or non identity problem designing for disability and reproductive cloning
