Technology in the Garden Michael I. Luger, Harvey A. Goldstein, 2000-11-09 More than half of the 116 research parks now operating in the United States were established during the 1980s with the aim of boosting regional economic growth But until now no one has systematically analyzed whether research parks do in fact generate new businesses and jobs Using their own surveys of all existing parks and case studies of three of the most successful Research Triangle Park in North Carolina Stanford Research Park in California and the University of Utah Research Park Michael Luger and Harvey Goldstein examine the economic impact of such facilities As the name suggests a research park is typically meant to provide a spacious setting where basic and applied technological research can be quietly pursued Because of the experience of a few older and prominent research parks new parks are expected to generate economic growth for their regions New or old most parks have close ties to universities which join in such ventures to enhance their capabilities as centers of research provide outlets for entrepreneurial faculty members and increase job opportunities for graduate students Too often the authors say the vision of incubating economic growth in a gardenlike preserve of research and development has failed because of poor planning lack of firm leadership and bad luck Although the longest lasting parks have met their original goals the newer ones have enjoyed at best only slight success Luger and Goldstein conclude that the older facilities have captured much of the market for concentrations of research and development firms and they discuss alternative strategies that could achieve some of the same goals as research parks but in a less costly way Many of these alternatives continue to include a role for universities and Luger and Goldstein shed fresh light on the linkage between higher education and the use of knowledge for profit

New Technology and Regional Development Bert Van Der Knapp, Egbert Wever, 2003-08-16 First Published in 2004 Since the second half of the seventies a period of economic recession a growing interest for technological change can be noticed in all old industrial countries The reason for this phenomenon is the conviction that the economic future of these countries will depend to a large degree on their ability to create new products and processes and to make these commercially viable Hence the stimulation and subsidising of all kinds of Research and Development R D activities by the governments of these countries Against this background it was certainly not unexpected that the IGU Commission on Industrial Change presided by Godfrey Linge decided to organise a congress on Technology and Industrial Change This congress was held in August 1985 at Nijmegen in the Netherlands In this book some of the papers presented there are published We are very happy that we were allowed to include the very interesting contributions of the representatives of Philips in Eindhoven and of the European Commission in Brussels

1978-84: A Select Bibliography Leslie Grayson, 2012-12-06 Silicon chip technology microprocessor technology information technology or quite simply new technology These are some of the names representing the microelectronics revolution depending upon the audience being addressed by speaker or writer No previous new industrial development has caused such widespread publicity and discussion amongst users and researchers as the new technology Concern is being expressed about the effects of new technology on employment job satisfaction social life leisure activities and the economics of commerce and industry The late 70s saw many doom laden predictions of those effects but by 1983 both management and trade unions were taking a more objective view of the social and economic impacts and many correspondents now see the new technology as a means of opening up new industries and overcoming the effects of world recessions The chip has involved the factory floor the office the supermarket and the home Electronic funds transfer electronic shopping microelectronic domestic appliances word processors and microprocessor controlled machinery mean that the new technology has pervaded all aspects of social and economic life and the developed countries are now coming to accept it as part of society as a whole Inevitably the flood of literature on the social and economic impacts of new technology has been overwhelming Unfortunately the quality of information and arguments propagated at conferences in journal papers and research reports has indicated that there has been little quantifiable evidence available on the effects of these impacts Technological Change and Regional
