Regions And Social Needs:

Rural Areas Between Regional Needs and Global Challenges Walter Leimgruber, Chang-yi David Chang, 2019-01-01

This book provides an up to date account of the many processes shaping and transforming rural space in various parts of the world. The various case studies focus on the multi functionality of the rural world and the driving forces behind it. The book demonstrates that rural areas are no longer simply characterized by an agricultural economy and instead accommodate multiple complementary activities. It also touches upon two major changes that have taken place. The first is the process of ruralization which has led to the clear distinction between town and countryside becoming blurred. Urban traits have penetrated rural areas and rural traits have invaded towns. The second change is that rural areas are increasingly seen as multi functional providers not only of food and other natural resources but also locations for the generation of renewable energy: wind farms, solar farms, biogas and regions for the preservation of biodiversity. These transformations have resulted in a new understanding and self image of rural areas and their populations.

Communities in Action National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Health and Medicine

Division, Board on Population Health and Public Health Practice, Committee on Community-Based Solutions to Promote Health Equity in the United States, 2017-03-27. In the United States some populations suffer from far greater disparities in health than others. Those disparities are caused not only by fundamental differences in health status across segments of the population but also because of inequities in factors that impact health status so called determinants of health. Only part of an individual's health status depends on his or her behavior and choice. Community wide problems like poverty, unemployment, poor education, inadequate housing, poor public transportation, interpersonal violence and decaying neighborhoods also contribute to health inequities as well as the historic and ongoing interplay of structures, policies and norms that shape lives. When these factors are not optimal in a community it does not mean they are intractable. Such inequities can be mitigated by social policies that can shape health in powerful ways. Communities in Action: Pathways to Health Equity seeks to delineate the causes of and the solutions to health inequities in the United States. This report focuses on what communities can do to promote health equity, what actions are needed by the many and varied stakeholders that are part of communities or support them as well as the root causes and structural barriers that need to be overcome.

Governmental Interventions, Social Needs, and the Management of U.S. Forests Roger A. Sedjo, 2016-03-17. Originally published in 1983. Governmental Interventions, Social Needs, and the Management of U.S. Forests aims to advise government and non government managers about the issues around forestry in the United States. This report emphasises the management of forest lands in relation to the welfare of society touching on issues such as forest service planning, the effect of state regulations on private forest investments and the adequacy of timber resources. disadvantaged groups and consideration is given to whether there are winners and losers arising from the activities and interventions of universities. The book distinguishes between discourses, activities and their impacts in considering the role of universities and emphasises the importance of history and context as important mediators of national and institutional policies. It examines some of the key partnerships which universities enter into within their regions and considers some of the factors which determine the nature of these partnerships. Implications are drawn out for university leaderships and for regional and national policy bodies. The book provides empirical evidence in a field marked by a considerable amount of rhetoric from interested parties. One of the book's conclusions is that there is considerable diversity among higher education institutions in how they perform a regional role but it is a significant question for each of them. Institutional variation and regional setting come together to shape what is achievable.
