Relations In Public:

Relations in Public Erving Goffman, 2017-07-28 Until recently to be in a public place meant to feel safe That has changed especially in cities Urban dwellers sense the need to quickly react to gestural cues from persons in their immediate presence in order to establish their relationship to each other Through this communication they hope to detect potential danger before it is too late for self defense or flight The ability to read accurately the informing signs by which strangers indicate their relationship to one another in public or semi public places without speaking has become as important as understanding the official written and spoken language of the country In Relations in Public Erving Goffman provides a grammar of the unspoken language used in public places He shows that the way strangers relate in public is part of a design by which friends and acquaintances manage their relationship in the presence of bystanders He argues that taken together this forms part of a new domain of inquiry into the rules for co mingling or public order Most people give little thought to how elaborate and complex our everyday behavior in public actually is For example we adhere to the rules of pedestrian traffic on a busy thoroughfare accept the usual ways of acting in a crowded elevator or subway car grasp the delicate nuances of conversational behavior and respond to the rich vocabulary of body gestures We behave differently at weddings at meals in crowds in couples and when alone Such everyday behavior though generally below the level of awareness embodies unspoken codes of social understandings necessary for the orderly conduct of society awareness for advantage Goffman aims to show that strategic interaction can be isolated analytically from the general study of communication and face to face interaction The first essay addresses expression games in which a participant spars to discover the value of information given openly or unwittingly by another The author uses vivid examples from espionage literature and high level political intrigue to show how people mislead one another in the information game Both observer and observed create evidence that is false and uncover evidence that is real In Strategic Interaction the book s second essay action is the central concern and expression games are secondary Goffman makes clear that often when it seems that an opponent sets off a course of action through verbal communication he really has a finger on your trigger your chips on the table or your check in his bank Communication may reinforce conduct but in the end action speaks louder Those who gamble with their wits and those who study those who do will find this analysis important and stimulating

Erving Goffman, The study of every unit of social organization must eventually lead to an analysis of the interaction of its elements The analytical distinction between units of organization and processes of interaction is therefore not destined to divide up our work for us A division of labor seems more likely to come from distinguishing among types of units among types of elements or among types of processes Sociologists have traditionally studied face to face interaction as part of the area of collective behavior the units of social organization involved are those that can form by virtue of a breakdown in ordinary social intercourse crowds mobs panics riots The other aspect of the problem of face to face interaction the units of organization in which orderly and uneventful face to face interaction occurs has been neglected until recently although there is some early work on classroom interaction topics of conversation committee meetings and public assemblies Instead of dividing face to face interaction into the eventful and the routine I propose a different division into unfocused interaction and focused interaction Unfocused interaction consists of those interpersonal communications that result solely by virtue of persons being in one another s presence as when two strangers across the room from each other check up on each other s clothing posture and general manner while each modifies his own demeanor because he himself is under observation Focused interaction occurs when people effectively agree to sustain for a time a single focus of cognitive and visual attention as in a conversation a board game or a joint task sustained by a close face to face circle of contributors Those sustaining together a single focus of attention will of course engage one another in unfocused interaction too They will not do so in their capacity as participants in the focused activity however and persons present who are not in the focused activity will equally participate in this unfocused interaction The two papers in this volume are concerned with focused interaction only I call the natural unit of social organization in which focused interaction occurs a focused gathering or an encounter or a situated activity system I assume that instances of this natural unit have enough in common to make it worthwhile to study them as a type Three different terms are used out of desperation rather than by design as will be suggested each of the three in its own way is unsatisfactory and each is satisfactory in a way that the others are not The two essays deal from different points of view with this single unit of social organization The first paper Fun in Games approaches focused gatherings from an examination of the kind of games that are played around a table The second paper Role Distance approaches focused gatherings through a review and criticism of social role analysis The study of focused gatherings has been greatly stimulated recently by the study of group psychotherapy and especially by small group analysis I feel however that full use of this work is impeded by a current tendency to identify focused gatherings too easily with social groups A small but interesting area of study is thus obscured by the biggest title social group that can be found for it Public Relations and the Public Interest

Jane Johnston, 2016-02-12 In this book Johnston seeks to put the public interest onto the public relations radar arguing the need for its clear articulation into mainstream public relations discourse This book examines literature from a range of fields and disciplines to develop a clearer understanding of the concept and then considers this within the theory and practice of public relations The book's themes include the role of language and discourse in establishing successful public interest PR and in perpetuating power imbalances intersections between CSR governance law and the public interest and how activism and social media have invigorated community control of the public interest Chapters explore the role of the public interest including cross cultural and multicultural challenges community and internal consultation communication choices and listening to minorities and subaltern publics
