Decolonising Blue Spaces in the Anthropocene Meg Parsons, Karen Fisher, Roa Petra Crease, 2021-02-15 This open access book crosses disciplinary boundaries to connect theories of environmental justice with Indigenous people's experiences of freshwater management and governance. It traces the history of one freshwater crisis: the degradation of Aotearoa New Zealand's Waip River to the settler colonial acts of ecological dispossession resulting in intergenerational injustices for Indigenous Māori iwi tribes. The authors draw on a rich empirical base to document the negative consequences of imposing Western knowledge, worldviews, laws, governance and management approaches onto Māori and their ancestral landscapes and waterscapes. Importantly, this book demonstrates how degraded freshwater systems can and are being addressed by Māori seeking to reassert their knowledge, authority and practices of kaitiakitanga (environmental guardianship). Co-governance and co-management agreements between iwi and the New Zealand Government over the Waip River highlight how Māori are envisioning and enacting more sustainable freshwater management and governance, thus seeking to achieve Indigenous environmental justice (IEJ). The book provides an accessible way for readers coming from a diversity of different backgrounds – be they academics, students, practitioners or decision makers – to develop an understanding of IEJ and its applicability to freshwater management and governance in the context of changing socio-economic, political and environmental conditions that characterise the Anthropocene.
