Pharmaceutical Agents IARC Working Group on the Evaluation of Carcinogenic Risks to Humans, 2000 Evaluates the carcinogenic risks to humans posed by the use of four antiretroviral agents four DNA topoisomerase II inhibitors used in the treatment of cancer and an additional three pharmaceutical agents hydroxyures phenolphthalein and vitamin K substances The volume marks the first IARC evaluation of nucleoside analogs that act as antiviral agents The evaluation responds in part to recent findings that zidovudine AZT an effective antiretroviral agent now being given to pregnant HIV infected women to prevent maternal to fetal transmission of the virus is a transplacental carcinogen in mice The opening monograph evaluates the carcinogenicity to humans of the antiretroviral nucleoside analogs zidovudine AZT zalcitabine ddC and didanosine ddI and the antiherpesvirus drug aciclovir Of these aciclovir and didanosine could not be classified on the basis of available data For zidovudine transplacental administration to mice resulted in an increased incidence and multiplicity of lung and liver tumours and in an increased incidence of female reproductive tract tumours in one study but not in another involving treatment at a lower dose Despite observation of toxic effects in some studies of humans human carcinogenicity data were judged to provide inadequate evidence of carcinogenicity in humans Zidovudine was classified as possibly carcinogenic to humans Similar weaknesses in human carcinogenicity data for zalcitabine which consistently induces thymic lymphomas in mice resulted in its classification as possibly carcinogenic to humans The second monograph evaluates four DNA topoisomerase II inhibitors etoposide teniposide mitoxantrone and amsacrine Of these etoposide one of the most widely used and effective cytotoxic drugs in combination therapy was classified as probably carcinogenic to humans and etoposide in combination with cisplatin and bleomycin was judged to be carcinogenic to humans Teniposide was classified as probably carcinogenic to humans and mitoxantrone and amsacrine were classified as possibly carcinogenic to humans Of the three pharmaceutical agents evaluated in the final monograph hydroxyurea which is widely used in cancer treatment and increasingly in combination with didanosine in HIV infection could not be classified Phenolphthalein a widely used laxative now being withdrawn from the market in many countries because of toxicological concerns was classified as possibly carcinogenic Vitamin K substances could not be classified on the basis of available evidence A Catalog of Books

Congress, 1927 Common Whites Bill

Cecil-Fronsman,1992-01-01 At the time of the Civil War roughly three out of every four southern whites did not own slaves Most of the rest owned only a few Until recently these common whites have been largely forgotten In the past few years several important studies have examined common whites in individual counties or groups of counties but they have focused on family life the economy or other specific features of the common white life Common Whites Class and Culture in Antebellum North Carolina is the first comprehensive examination of these non slaveholders and small slaveholders in over forty years Using North Carolina as a case in point Bill Cecil Fronsman has sketched a broad portrait of the world made by this group Drawing on travelers accounts newspapers folksongs and folktales quantitative analysis of census reports and above all the common whites own words he has woven the individual threads of the culture into an in depth analysis of their world and their responses to it This work focuses on the issues of class and culture Here Cecil Fronsman explores why the common whites accepted the slave system even though it worked to their disadvantage He demonstrates how the market economy of the outside world played a negligible role in their lives and how their unique traditional attitudes toward family and community evolved Finally he recounts how though most common whites supported the Confederate cause during the Civil War many of the old loyalties broke down during the war years The common whites though they outnumbered the slaves and the elites make up the least studied group in the Old South This book takes us beyond the stereotypes and misconceptions to a better understanding of a group of people virtually ignored by traditional history
