Hanks,1990-12-07 Referential Practice is an anthropological study of language use in a contemporary Maya community It examines the routine conversational practices in which Maya speakers make reference to themselves and to each other to their immediate contexts and to their world Drawing on extensive fieldwork in Oxkutzcab Yucat n William F Hanks develops a sociocultural approach to reference in natural languages The core of this approach lies in treating speech as a social engagement and reference as a practice through which actors orient themselves in the world The conceptual framework derives from cultural anthropology linguistic pragmatics interpretive sociology and cognitive semantics As his central case Hanks undertakes a comprehensive analysis of deixis linguistic forms that fix reference in context such as English I you this that here and there He shows that Maya deixis is a basic cultural construct linking language with body space domestic space agricultural and ritual practices and other fields of social activity Using this as a guide to ethnographic description he discovers striking regularities in person reference and modes of participation the role of perception in reference and varieties of spatial orientation including locative deixis Traditionally considered a marginal area in linguistics and virtually untouched in the ethnographic literature the study of referential deixis becomes in Hanks s treatment an innovative and revealing methodology Referential Practice is the first full length study of actual deictic use in a non Western language the first in depth study of speech practice in Yucatec Maya culture and the first detailed account of the relation between routine conversation embodiment and ritual discourse
