

In this issue's feature article, Scott explores in depth a serious problem which the LAGSDC Community may now be facing. The same underlying factors could be causing the decline in membership in the larger square dance community as well . . .

A QUESTION OF BALANCE

by
Scott Carey

When Western Star Dancers was formed some eight years ago, we set about to incorporate the traditions and sensibilities of Square Dancing in general. It's true that we did modify some particular aspects to reflect our own Gay culture, eliminating the requirement for crinolines and long-sleeved shirts in favor of jeans and T-shirts as one example, but the prevailing philosophy was "why reinvent the wheel?" Hundreds of years of square dance evolution had already proven the wisdom of standardized calls, the value of conventions, and the need for a specific teaching order as developed by Callerlab, to name a few. Adopting these time-proven principles and understanding the forces or reasonings behind them has served us well.

We approach our second decade of operation while various "non-Callerlab" formats which sprang up in the early eighties (some of which were extremely popular) are now extinct. By taking advantage of the lessons already learned from previous battles, Western Star Dancers, as well as other Clubs of the LAGSDC, have been able to build a strong and viable foundation for our activity. This does not mean, however, that there are no problems.

If you read the current literature, publications such as LAGSDC Clubs' newsletters and American Square Dance, you will basically find the same issues being discussed. Gay and Straight square dancers not only share in a common ground of tradition and experience but also in the current problems of square dancing. What is often overlooked in addressing these problems, however, are some of those same time-honored principles and forces of square dancing - what makes square dancing what it is and why - that have served all of us so well. One important recurring problem, and one that I would like to address in this light, is what I call the "balance between the programs" issue. First, some background.

When Callerlab set up the teaching order, it divided the calls into successive groupings and referred to them as "levels." Later, it dropped the designation "level" because it was promoting the unfortunate perception of a hierarchy of dancing ability; that is, that a Challenge dancer was "better" than an Advanced dancer who was "better" than a Plus dancer and so forth.

Instead of "level", Callerlab began to use the term "program", which more correctly described the integral units that have their own identities, value and place in the whole square dance picture. These programs give square dancers choices on how they wish to allocate their time, energy and interest. Each successive program requires additional time to learn and master and offers an increased degree of complexity. In a way, square dancing as a whole is faced with the same decisions that the individual dancer faces - how to allocate time and energy. With limited resources, and varied programs, how can we as a community support and promote our entire activity?

There are no easy answers. Some call for the elimination of all upper-level dancing, or the consolidation of Basic, Mainstream and Plus programs into one new master program of 75 calls. Already, we have seen the consolidation of calls. Already, we have seen the consolidation of Plus 1 and 2 into a single program, and A1 and A2 are for the most part treated as a single Advanced program. Whatever shape they may
