Environmental History in the Making Estelita Vaz,Cristina Joanaz de Melo,Lígia M. Costa Pinto,2016-10-13 This book is the product of the 2nd World Conference on Environmental History held in Guimar es Portugal in 2014 It gathers works by authors from the five continents addressing concerns raised by past events so as to provide information to help manage the present and the future It reveals how our cultural background and examples of past territorial intervention can help to combat political and cultural limitations through the common language of environmental benefits without disguising harmful past human interventions Considering that political ideologies such as socialism and capitalism as well as religion fail to offer global paradigms for common ground an environmentally positive discourse instead of an ecological determinism might serve as an umbrella common language to overcome blocking factors real or invented and avoid repeating ecological loss Therefore agency environmental speech and historical research are urgently needed in order to sustain environmental paradigms and overcome political cultural and economic interests in the public arena This book intertwines reflections on our bonds with landscapes processes of natural and scientific transfer across the globe the changing of ecosystems the way in which scientific knowledge has historically both accelerated destruction and allowed a better distribution of vital resources or as it in today's world can offer alternatives that avoid harming those same vital natural resources water soil and air In addition it shows the relevance of cultural factors both in the taming of nature in favor of human comfort and in the role of the environment matters in the forging of cultural identities which cannot be detached from technical intervention in the world In short the book firstly studies the past approaching it as a data set of how the environment has shaped culture secondly seeks to understand the present and thirdly assesses future perspectives what to keep what to change and what to dream anew considering that conventional solutions have not sufficed to protect life on our planet

Hideaway James Houston, 2000-09 For more than thirty years James Houston has been flying to Vancouver then taking a little plane north and west to the airport at Sandspit on the Queen Charlotte Islands After the ferry ride to Skidegate he takes the single road running north on Graham Island and settles down in his small cottage by the bridge over the Tlell River There he fishes writes draws roams around and rejoices that he and his wife Alice have found the perfect place People go misty eyed when they recall the Queen Charlottes those distant islands in the Pacific within sight of Alaska that are miraculously temperate and see little snow The glaciers of the Ice Age passed the islands by leaving a treasure trove for botanists and biologists Today the warming Japan current still protects its shores Among its many delights are spectacular wildlife of all kinds On land are many deer river otters and the largest black bears in the world Its waters shelter giant crabs salmon and killer whales And the air is filled with remarkable birds especially the ravens and bald eagles that are everywhere Special landscapes include moss hung rainforests that remind us that this is Emily Carr country sheer cliffs that plunge straight into the Pacific miles of empty beaches piled with sculptured driftwood Guinness black forest pools and thundering seascapes and even a secret Haida mountain that provides the rare carving stone known as argillite These are the islands of Haida Gwaii of course and James Houston has always had an affinity for native people whether with Ojibway friends in his Ontario boyhood or with Inuit in the North His book tells the history of the Haida the coming of the Eagle and the Raven clans and the rich culture they developed in this land of plenty Then came the bloody sea otter fur trade with sometimes ruthless sea captains two centuries ago and later the smallpox that wiped out 80 per cent of the Haida population with social effects that have lasted to this day Houston also tells us about totem poles and potlatches two traditions that he has seen being revived And while many old Haida legends adorn his book there are also fine modern characters including the old Haida visitor who sang a song to her river chez Houston and the Houstons friend Teddy Bellis who liked to offer their big city guests a snack of smoked dog From a visit to the awesome power of the crumbling poles at the deserted village of Ninistints in the south all the way to the site of a crab fishing tragedy on North Beach the book covers the range of the archipelago But James Houston is a fanatical fly fisherman and his love of fishing on his doorstep and dramatic tales of salmon or trout caught or lost by him or Alice or their friends runs through the book So too does their beloved Tlell River which ebbs and flows with the tide a mere twenty feet from his window As he and Alice arrive and open up the old green cottage their excitement will affect everyone whose family has ever had a special summer place a hideaway Reading this book is almost as good as being there
