Excerpt from The Queen of the Air: Being a Study of the Greek Myths of Cloud My days and strength have lately been much broken and I never more felt the insufficiency of both than in preparing for the press the following desultory memoranda on a most noble subject. But I leave them now as they stand for no time nor labor would be enough to complete them to my contentment and I believe that they contain suggestions which may be followed with safety by persons who are beginning to take interest in the aspects of mythology which only recent investigation has removed from the region of conjecture into that of rational inquiry. I have some advantage also from my field work in the interpretation of myths relating to natural phenomena and I have had always near me since we were at college together a sure and unweariedly kind guide in my friend Charles Newton to whom we owe the finding of more treasure in mines of marble than were it rightly estimated all California could buy. I must not however permit the chance of his name being in any wise associated with my errors. Much of my work has been done obstinately in my own way and he is never responsible for me though he has often kept me right or at least enabled me to advance in a right direction.
