The main photograph of the book cover depicts a wide, calm river or basin under a vast, hazy sky at sunset. The sun is a small, bright orb on the left horizon, casting a long, shimmering reflection across the water. The foreground is dark and silhouetted, showing some distant structures and trees. The overall mood is serene and contemplative.

Water Binayak Ray, 2008-07-25 Water The Looming Crisis in India analyzes the key issues in developing national freshwater policies for the mainland countries of the South Asian sub continent Ray suggests that freshwater policy must cover all aspects of physical environment and human life by noting that food and drought management are parts of freshwater policy and acknowledging that water is a scarce natural resource and has economic value He calls for the development of basin wide policies to minimize conflicts within riparian countries as well as a freshwater policy baseline to minimize internal conflicts on water sharing arrangements By pointing out the need for full participation of all stakeholders in developing a baseline policy including people displaced by the construction of large dams Ray suggests a new system in which riparian countries are guaranteed that no water related project proceeds without a transparently developed environmental impact assessment and evaluation of alternative options

Complexity of Transboundary Water Conflicts Enamul Choudhury, Shafiqul Islam, 2018-12-07 Complexity of Transboundary Water Conflicts seeks to understand transboundary water issues as complex systems with contingent conditions and possibilities To address those conditions and leverage the possibilities it introduces the concept of enabling conditions as a pragmatic way to identify and act on the emergent possibilities to resolve transboundary water issues Based on this theoretical frame the book applies the ideas and tools from complexity science contingency and enabling conditions to account for events in the formulation of treaties agreements between disputing riparian states in river basins across the world Indus Jordan Nile Ganges Brahmaputra Colorado Danube Senegal and Zayandehrud It also includes a section with scholars reflections on the relevance and weakness of the theoretical framework

Environment and Pollution in Colonial India Janine Wilhelm, 2016-04-28 India is facing a river pollution crisis today The origins of this crisis are commonly traced back to post Independence economic development and urbanisation This book in contrast shows that some important early roots of India s river pollution problem and in particular the pollution of the Ganges lie with British colonial policies on wastewater disposal during the late 19th and early 20th centuries Analysing the two cornerstones of colonial river pollution history during the late 19th and early 20th centuries the introduction of sewerage systems and the introduction of biological sewage treatment technologies in cities along the Ganges the author examines different controversies around the proposed and actual discharge of untreated treated sewage into the Ganges which involved officials on different administrative levels as well as the Indian public The analysis shows that the colonial state essentially ignored the problematic aspects of sewage disposal into rivers which were clearly evident from European experience Guided by colonial ideology and fiscal policy colonial officials supported the introduction of the cheapest available sewerage technologies which were technologies causing extensive pollution Thus policies on sewage disposal into the Ganges and other Indian rivers took on a definite shape around the turn of the 20th century and acquired certain enduring features that were to exert great negative influence on the future development of river pollution in India A well researched study on colonial river pollution history this book presents an innovative contribution to South Asian environmental history It is of interest to scholars working on colonial South Asian and environmental history and the colonial history of public health science and technology

The World Water Crisis Stephen Brichieri-Colombi, 2008-10-30 In the last decade water resources planners have frequently signalled an impending water crisis The message is that the world is running out of water and that only by careful planning and the adoption of integrated water resources management can catastrophe be avoided Stephen Brichieri Colombi challenges these perceptions He maintains that the crisis is one of resource management rather than availability it arises because water resource planners advocate exploitation of rivers without due regard to social environmental and geopolitical consequences The author advances a new paradigm water in the national economy which will enable developing countries to meet future food and water demands without increasing abstraction from rivers and consequential riparian conflict This is a powerful re appraisal of the development of global water resources

The Law of Non-navigational Uses of International Watercourses

Nahid Islam, 2010-01-01 Presentation de l'auteur Despite Asia's large share of global water resources and the importance of its water for sustaining one of the largest agrarian populations in the world Asia's trans boundary water resource management regimes are poorly developed There are only two working international regimes in South and South east Asia the Mekong and the Indus regimes The remaining international watercourses in Asia are used by riparian countries in a self interested manner without much consideration for the interests of other states or for the environment These national interests do not often represent the interests and needs of the local people This book is divided into three Parts Part I discusses the different contexts of law making in the industrialized west and in agrarian societies in Asia as well as the changing context of law making following the emergence of the concept of sustainable development Part II discusses the regime of international watercourses Part III of the book presents two case studies in Asia the Mekong and the Ganges The main argument is that in the absence of public participation in decision making and resource management the basin states revert to using the watercourses according to the principles of the classical regime The result so far has been unsustainable development environmental degradation and growing poverty of local user communities

Sustainable Development of the Ganges-Brahmaputra-Meghna Basins Asit K. Biswas, Juha I. Uitto, 2001 The Ganges Brahmaputra Meghna basin contains the largest number of the world's poor in any one region The population is increasing steadily and unless the current development trends are broken poverty will become even more pervasive The region is endowed with considerable natural resources that could be used to foster sustainable economic development Water could be successfully used as the engine to promote economic development of the region which has been hindered because the most populous part of the basin is shared by three countries Bangladesh India and Nepal who have in the past been unable to agree to an integrated development plan In Sustainable Development of the Ganges Brahmaputra Meghna Basins leading technocrats and intellectuals discuss how through cooperation between the countries concerned and by taking a holistic development approach the quality of life of the people of the basin could be improved significantly within a reasonable timeframe
