Klein,2011-09-30 An expert explains how the conventional wisdom about decision making can get us into trouble and why experience can t be replaced by rules procedures or analytical methods In making decisions when should we go with our gut and when should we try to analyze every option When should we use our intuition and when should we rely on logic and statistics Most of us would probably agree that for important decisions we should follow certain guidelines gather as much information as possible compare the options pin down the goals before getting started But in practice we make some of our best decisions by adapting to circumstances rather than blindly following procedures In Streetlights and Shadows Gary Klein

debunks the conventional wisdom about how to make decisions He takes ten commonly accepted claims about decision making and shows that they are better suited for the laboratory than for life The standard advice works well when everything is clear but the tough decisions involve shadowy conditions of complexity and ambiguity Gathering masses of information for example works if the information is accurate and complete but that doesn't often happen in the real world Think about the careful risk calculations that led to the downfall of the Wall Street investment houses Klein offers more realistic ideas about how to make decisions in real life settings He provides many examples ranging from airline pilots and weather forecasters to sports announcers and Captain Jack Aubrey in Patrick O Brian's Master and Commander novels to make his point All these decision makers saw things that others didn't They used their expertise to pick up cues and to discern patterns and trends We can make better decisions Klein tells us if we are prepared for complexity and ambiguity and if we will stop expecting the data to tell us everything I know of no one who combines theory and observation intellectual rigor and painstaking observation of the real world so brilliantly and gracefully as Gary Klein Malcolm Gladwell author of Outliers and Blink
