Facing the Unseen Damon Tweedy, M.D., 2024-04-09 From the New York Times bestselling author of Black Man in a White Coat comes a powerful and urgent call to center psychiatry and mental health care into the mainstream of medicine As much as we all might wish that mental health problems with their elusive causes and unsettling behaviors simply did not exist millions of people suffer from them sometimes to an extreme extent Many others face addiction to alcohol and other drugs as overdose and suicide deaths abound Yet the vast majority of doctors receive minimal instruction in treating these conditions during their lengthy medical training This mismatch ignores the clear overlap between physical and mental distress and too often puts psychiatrists on the outside looking in as the medical system continues to fail many patients In Facing The Unseen bestselling author professor of psychiatry and practicing physician Damon Tweedy guides us through his days working in outpatient clinics emergency rooms and hospitals as he meets people from all walks of life who are grappling with physical and psychological illnesses In powerful compassionate and eloquent prose Tweedy argues for a more comprehensive and integrated approach where people with mental illness have a health care system that places their full well being front and center

Death in Living Gray

John Clayton, 2006-06 Prudence Abernathy left her job in a California art gallery to marry a young army captain on the way home from Vietnam. She settled into the life of a country housewife at the old family plantation in Mason County, Virginia. That is until her husband is disbarred from practicing law. Prudence has to pitch in to keep the family finances afloat first by selling off antiques from the manor house and then by welding funky furniture out of cast off farm machinery. The big stuff like tractors and combines. She's making do selling the furniture mostly to the commuters who are moving into the northern end of the county from the Washington DC area. Then one of her heavy tractor sofas crashes through the parlor floor of the Abernathy manor house causing part of the chimney facing to disintegrate. The collapse exposes the secret compartment in the wall next to the fireplace allowing a skeleton in a Confederate Lieutenant's uniform to fall out. While dusting for prints in the compartment the police forensic team also finds an expensive bracelet that was stolen the previous year from a retired Yankee businessman J. Augustus Pickerill. It's possible that the person in Confederate uniform was involved in the theft during the Confederate Memorial Day Ball that Mr. Pickerill hosted during the previous May and hid there after he was mortally wounded by an accomplice who didn't want to share the loot. But it is also possible that the theft was done before the ball while the Pickerills were out of the country on vacation. Unfortunately Prudence was making some tractor furniture in Mr. Pickerill's rec room during the vacation period. That gave her the opportunity to steal the jewelry. The local sheriff also decides that she had the means since the safe containing the jewelry was opened with a welder's cutting torch and the motive since the Abernathys are chronically broke. Aided by her friends and her status as an almost local after living in the county for thirty years she sets out to prove her innocence. As she works her way down the list of possible suspects she comes into sometimes amusing contact with many of the citizens of Mason County who when not answering Prudence's questions are busy trying to navigate their lives between the rural Old South and the encroaching suburbia spreading its technocrat tentacles out from the big city.
