

Maxfield Parrish

The most popular American artist of his day, Maxfield Parrish (American, 1875-1966) painted with minute attention to the appearance and behavior of real trees, mountains, clouds—and added effects that came straight from his imagination. Mythical and real creatures and landscapes mingled so naturally as to create a sense of reality that can be briefly entered and savored: you can almost smell the pine duff underfoot in his forests.

Parrish's images graced advertisements for everything from light bulbs to time. A Parrish art print hung in one of every four American homes. And were in his lifetime, Maxfield Parrish's paintings remain among the most popular American art prints. Samples of his art prints, calendar illustrations, and more.
