Keller, 2015 Maya Deren 1917-1961 was a Russian born American filmmaker theorist poet and photographer working at the forefront of the American avant garde in the 1940s and 1950s Influenced by Jean Cocteau and Marcel Duchamp she is best known for her seminal film Meshes of the Afternoon 1943 a dream like experiment with time and symbol looped narrative and provocative imagery This book assesses the filmmaker's completed work alongside her incomplete projects arguing that Deren's overarching aesthetic is founded on principles of contingency and openness which give her work singular depth but also complicate its making Combining documentary experimental and creative approaches to filmmaking Deren created a wholly original experience for film audiences and this critical retrospective illuminates these productive tensions which continue to energize film

Points of Resistance Lauren Rabinovitz, 2003 In detailing the relationship of three women filmmakers lives and films to the changing institutions of the post World War II era Lauren Rabinovitz has created the first feminist social history of the North American avant garde cinema At a time when there were few women directors in commercial films the postwar avant garde movement offered an opportunity Rabinovitz argues that avant garde cinema open to women because of its marginal status in the art world included women as filmmakers organizers and critics Focusing on Maya Deren Shirley Clarke and Joyce Wieland Rabinovitz illustrates how women used bold physical images to enhance their work and how each provided entrance to her subversive art while remaining culturally acceptable She combines archival materials with her own interviews to show how the women's labor and films even their identities as women filmmakers were produced disseminated and understood With a new preface and an updated bibliography Points of Resistance simultaneously demonstrates the avant garde's importance as an organizational network for women filmmakers and the processes by which women remained marginal figures within that network

The Most Typical Avant-Garde David James, 2005-05-30 Los Angeles has nourished a dazzling array of independent cinemas avant garde and art cinema ethnic and industrial films pornography documentaries and many other far flung corners of film culture This glorious panoramic history of film production outside the commercial studio system reconfigures Los Angeles rather than New York as the true center of avant garde cinema in the United States As he brilliantly delineates the cultural perimeter of the film business from the earliest days of cinema to the contemporary scene David James argues that avant garde and minority filmmaking in Los Angeles has in fact been the prototypical attempt to create emancipatory and progressive culture Drawing from urban history and geography local news reporting and a wide range of film criticism James gives astute analyses of scores of films many of which are to be found only in archives He also looks at some of the most innovative moments in Hollywood revealing the full extent of the cross fertilization that occurred between the studio system and films created outside it Throughout he demonstrates that Los Angeles has been in the aesthetic and social vanguard in all cinematic periods from the Socialist cinemas of the early teens and 1930s to the personal cinemas of psychic self investigation in the 1940s to attempts in the 1960s to revitalize the industry with the counterculture's utopian visions and to the 1970s when African Americans Asian Americans Latinos women gays and lesbians worked to create cinemas of their own James takes us up to the 1990s and beyond to explore new forms of art cinema that are now transforming the representation of Southern California's geography
