Quest For Grace:

GraceQuest Robert V. Rakestraw, 2015-04-13 In this fascinating spiritual theological autobiography Robert Rakestraw tells of his lifelong unceasing search for God After a troubled and unconventional childhood he came to know the grace and freedom of God in a personal way during his college years He then embarked on an unwavering intellectual and spiritual quest for truth and meaning in life Without technical language Rakestraw highlights significant developments and revisions in his understanding of God and God's ways of interacting with the world In striking and sometimes intimate detail he relates compellingly his experiences as a student pastor professor sufferer heart transplant recipient and above all seeker of God Dr Rakestraw's gripping portrayal of his difficulties and sufferings especially with regard to health issues does not come across as depressing Rather it presents the sustaining love and goodness of God in such a way that will pull readers in to investigate the remarkable and freely offered grace of God extolled by the author

Tuning in to Grace André Louf, 1992 How can we attune ourselves to God's grace It always takes a lifetime to do and this is because God wants it so When first surprised by grace people speak of a conversion Some consider this the end of the journey Those familiar with spiritual development realize that conversion is merely the beginning of an ongoing process Throughout our lives God's grace continues to draw us and help us turn ever and again back to him and his great guiding love Cistercian abbot Andr Louf writes of the power of faith growth through testing contrition of heart spiritual companionship prayer and the fruits of the spirit Andr Louf is abbot of the cistercian monastery of Katzberg Mont des Cats France

Machines of Loving Grace John Markoff, 2016-08-16 As robots are increasingly integrated into modern society on the battlefield and the road in business education and health Pulitzer Prize winning New York Times science writer John Markoff searches for an answer to one of the most important questions of our age will these machines help us or will they replace us In the past decade alone Google introduced us to driverless cars Apple debuted a personal assistant that we keep in our pockets and an Internet of Things connected the smaller tasks of everyday life to the farthest reaches of the internet There is little doubt that robots are now an integral part of society and cheap sensors and powerful computers will ensure that in the coming years these robots will soon act on their own This new era offers the promise of immense computing power but it also reframes a question first raised more than half a century ago at the birth of the intelligent machine Will we control these systems or will they control us In Machines of Loving Grace New York Times reporter John Markoff the first reporter to cover the World Wide Web offers a sweeping history of the complicated and evolving relationship between humans and computers Over the recent years the pace of technological change has accelerated dramatically reintroducing this difficult ethical quandary with newer and far weightier consequences As Markoff chronicles the history of automation from the birth of the artificial intelligence and intelligence augmentation communities in the 1950s to the modern day brain trusts at Google and Apple in Silicon Valley and on to the expanding tech corridor between Boston and New York he traces the different ways developers have addressed this fundamental problem and urges them to carefully consider the consequences of their work We are on the verge of a technological revolution Markoff argues and robots will profoundly transform the way our lives are organized Developers must now draw a bright line between what is human and what is machine or risk upsetting the delicate balance between them
