Evans Ph.D., 2010-06-01 Where were Venetian blinds invented What color is the black box on a commercial airplane Where did India ink originate Most of us know more than we think we know We also think we know more than we actually do because some of what we think we know simply ain't so We all harbor misconceptions that are accepted not only because they are popular but also because they make sense It makes sense to believe for example that

German chocolate originated in Germany rather than the truth that German chocolate is so named because it was created by Sam German. It seems logical to believe that Mercury is the hottest planet because of its proximity to the sun or that buttermilk contains butter that Danish pastry is from Denmark and that the boat race America's Cup was named after the United States of America. Get to the Point! Joel Schwartzberg, 2017-10-16 In this indispensable guide for anyone who must communicate in speech or writing Schwartzberg shows that most of us fail to convince because we don't have a point, a concrete contention that we can argue, defend, illustrate and prove. He lays out step by step how to develop one. In Joel's Schwartzberg's ten plus years as a strategic communications trainer the biggest obstacle he's come across is one that connects directly to nervousness: stammering, rambling and epic fail is that most speakers and writers don't have a point. They typically have just a title, a theme, a topic, an idea, an assertion, a catchphrase or even something much less. A point is something more. It's a contention you can propose, argue, defend, illustrate and prove. A point offers a position of potential value. Global warming is real is not a point. Scientific evidence shows that global warming is a real human generated problem that will have a devastating environmental and financial impact is a point. When we have a point our influence snaps into place. We communicate belief, conviction and urgency. This book shows you how to identify your point, leverage it, stick to it and sell it and how to train others to identify and successfully make their own points.
