Dainotto, 2007-01-09 A postcolonial study of eighteenth and nineteenth century theorizations that have informed the dominant idea of Europe a concept that has marginalized the southern other within its own borders A Vintage from Atlantis Clark Ashton Smith, 2011-06-23 The object had the form of a great jar with a tapering neck and a deep round abdomens body It was wholly encrusted with shells and corals that had gathered upon it as if through many ages in the ocean deeps and was festooned with weeds and sea flowers such as we had never before beheld so that we could not determine the substance of which it was made Excerpt I thank you friend but I am no drinker of wine not even if it be the rarest Canary or the oldest Amontillado Wine is a mocker strong drink is raging and more than others I have reason to know the truth that was writ by Solomon the Jewish king Give ear if ye will and I shall tell you a story such as would halt the half drained cup on the lips of the hardiest bibber We were seven and thirty buccaneers who raked the Spanish Main under Barnaby Dwale he that was called Red Barnaby for the spilling of blood that attended him everywhere Our ship the Black Falcon could outfly and outstrike all other craft that flew the Jolly Roger Full often Captain

Dwale was wont to seek a remote isle on the eastward verge of the West Indies and lighten the vessel of its weight of ingots and doubloons The isle was far from the common course of maritime traffic and was not known to maps or other mariners so it suited our purpose well It was a place of palms and sand and ciffs with a small harbor sheltered by the curving outstretched arms of rugged reefs on which the dark ocean climbed and gnashed its fangs of white foam without troubling the tranquil waters beyond I know not how many times we had visited the isle but the soil beneath many a coco tree was heavy with our hidden trove There we had stored the loot of bullion laden ships the massy plate and jewels of cathedral towns Even as to all mortal things an ending came at last to our visits We had gathered a goodly cargo but might have stayed longer on the open main where the Spaniards passed if a tempest had not impended We were near the secret isle as it chanced when the skies began to blacken and wallowing heavily in the rising seas we fled to our placid harbor reaching it by night fall Before dawn the hurricane had blown by and the sun came up in cloudless amber and blue We proceeded with the landing and burying of our chests of coin and gems and ingots which was a task of some length and afterward we refilled our water casks at a cool sweet spring that ran from beneath the palmy hill not far inland
