Rules Of Green:

Standards for Internal Control in the Federal Government United States Government Accountability Office, 2019-03-24 Policymakers and program managers are continually seeking ways to improve accountability in achieving an entity's mission. A key factor in improving accountability in achieving an entity's mission is to implement an effective internal control system. An effective internal control system helps an entity adapt to shifting environments, evolving demands, changing risks, and new priorities. As programs change and entities strive to improve operational processes and implement new technology, management continually evaluates its internal control system so that it is effective and updated when necessary. Section 3512 c and d of Title 31 of the United States Code, commonly known as the Federal Managers Financial Integrity Act (FMFIA), requires the Comptroller General to issue standards for internal control in the federal government.

The New Rules of Green Marketing Jacquelyn A. Ottman, 2011 Green products have been around since the 1970s, but it's only in recent years that they've become ubiquitous. It's not because consumers suddenly prize sustainability above all. It's because savvy green marketers are no longer trying to sell the earth; instead, they're promoting the value their products provide: better health, superior performance, good taste, cost effectiveness, or simply convenience. This central emphasis on primary benefits, the new rule, is critical to winning over the mainstream consumer. The New Rules of Green Marketing helps readers understand why value-based sustainability marketing has become a critical organizational capacity and how they themselves can adopt this approach. Drawing on the latest data from leading researchers and reflecting on learnings from her corporate clients and other pioneers, including GE, Nike, Method, Starbucks, Timberland, HP, NatureWorks, Procter & Gamble, Stonyfield Farm, and Wal-Mart, Ottman provides practical strategies, tools, and inspiration for building every aspect of a credible value-based green marketing strategy. She covers using a proactive approach to sustainability to spur innovation, developing products that are green throughout their life cycle, communicating credibly to avoid accusations of greenwashing, teaming up with stakeholders to maximize outreach to consumers, taking advantage of social media, and much more. This book takes the best of Ottman's previous groundbreaking work, It's Not What You Eat, and updates it for the 21st century. Her new rules relegate traditional green guilt approaches to the recycling bin of history, break green products out of their niche, and ultimately do a far better job of advancing the triple bottom line of people, profits, and planet.

Rethinking Private Authority Jessica F. Green,2013-12-22 Rethinking Private Authority examines the role of non state actors in global environmental politics arguing that a fuller understanding of their role requires a new way of conceptualizing private authority Jessica Green identifies two distinct forms of private authority one in which states delegate authority to private actors and another in which entrepreneurial actors generate their own rules persuading others to adopt them Drawing on a wealth of empirical evidence spanning a century of environmental rule making Green shows how the delegation of authority to private actors has played a small but consistent role in multilateral environmental agreements over the past fifty years largely in the area of treaty implementation This contrasts with entrepreneurial authority where most private environmental rules have been created in the past two decades Green traces how this dynamic and fast growing form of private authority is becoming increasingly common in areas ranging from organic food to green building practices to sustainable tourism She persuasively argues that the configuration of state preferences and the existing institutional landscape are paramount to explaining why private authority emerges and assumes the form that it does In depth cases on climate change provide evidence for her arguments Groundbreaking in scope Rethinking Private Authority demonstrates that authority in world politics is diffused across multiple levels and diverse actors and it offers a more complete picture of how private actors are helping to shape our response to today s most pressing environmental problems

Green Fiscal Rules? Challenges and Policy Alternatives Francesca Caselli,Andresa Lagerborg,Mr. Paulo A Medas,2024-06-21 This paper studies the impact of green fiscal rules designed to protect climate related spending on debt dynamics Simulations of green rules that exempt green spending from the rule limits for an emergingmarket economy illustrate that they can lead to unsustainable debt dynamics when the net zero emissions goal is pursued mostly using spending based instruments e.g investment and subsidies Or the rule would need to implicitly assume a large fiscal adjustment in the non green budget which would undermine its credibility It will be needed to build broad public consensus for a more comprehensive fiscal strategy that tackles the difficult policy tradeoffs that will be required and takes into account
