Globalization and the City Collectif, 2016-09-29 The world today is far less a global village than a global city as global network of multidimensional urban spaces of congestion prominently forming and also formed by globalization But the relevance of cities is nothing but new They were essential for culture and civilization worldwide they allowed a centralization of power and knowledge and they were crucial for the division of labor and for the organization of mass demand Further as places of intense and continuous interactions cities are the locations par excellence for global history to take place Thus there is a need to study the history of cities in connection with the history of globalization from this perspective This book is dedicated to contribute to the still underdeveloped but growing literature connecting the history of cities worldwide and their relation to global processes The authors do so from various disciplinary backgrounds and by referring to different times and places We visit ancient Alexandria nineteenth century Zanzibar and modern day S o Paolo among others and we view these cities not only in their globality but also through their heritage their economic relevance their architecture or financial flows connecting them Further the book also contains systematic considerations about global city especially the general role of cities in development cities in global history teaching and cities relationships to global commodity chains Rural manufacture and sales of such goods economic historians have given the subject little attention despite the fact that the growth of international trade and the lengthening of commodity chains played a major role in the spread of such practices. The problem is approached in several ways. Part I of the book examines the ways in which the asymmetry of product quality information was reduced and mechanisms were developed to bring greater order in the markets using case studies on cotton, fiber, silk, pongee, cotton cloth, fertilizer, and tea. Part II of the book focuses on problems associated with imported everyday use items which are referred to here as small things and the role played by imitations of such everyday goods as soap, matches, glass bottles, and toys in the development of the modern economies of Japan, China, and Taiwan. The project brings together the work of an international team of scholars who offer important historical perspectives on these issues, exploring the ways in which new institutions were created that continue to play a role in contemporary global economic activities.
