Policy Reforms and Agriculture Development in Central Asia Sandjar Djalalov,Suresh Chandra Babu,2006-07-02 Achieving sustainable agricultural development is at the forefront of the poverty reduction objective of the Central Asian republics Kazakhstan the Kyrgyz Republic Tajikistan Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan Since independence the countries of the Central Asian region have undergone a series of transition from centrally planned economies to a more market oriented system Wide ranging policy reforms have been implemented although in varying degrees in the five Central Asian countries Despite great efforts by the countries and the external advice and efforts of international agencies to help them to follow a dynamic growth path the progress in policy reforms has been frustratingly slow Generating momentum to reorient the approach and the sequencing of policy reform packages will require rethinking of the policy reform process This is particularly so in the food agriculture and natural resource sectors This further requires improved understanding among the policymakers donors and international agencies of the impact of policy alternatives so that policy reforms and the speed with which they have been implemented are consistent with the objectives and the social and political realities of individual countries in the region Involving the local policy research community in identifying critical issues and challenges setting priorities among them for food and agricultural and natural resource policy research and analysis and implementing joint research studies is the best way to generate knowledge on the impact of policy reforms and to increase ownership of policy design and implementation Looking Beyond the Horizon William R. Uzbekistan has achieved sustained growth through its gradual transition to a market based economy through cautious economic policy reforms Despite its gradual approach to development challenges the country experienced the smallest output decline among former Soviet economies and enjoyed high rates of economic growth from 2004 to 2015 largely driven by the high prices of its major export commodities However the drop in the global prices of many key commodities in recent years have severely impacted Uzbekistan's economy Under these circumstances the new government introduced major reforms The pace of reform is unprecedented The government has formulated its long term economic strategy in its Vision 2030 which aims to double the country's gross domestic product by 2030 through a program of economic diversification This book analyzes how Uzbekistan can boost sustainable economic growth to create more and better jobs It considers how the country can consolidate achievements from recent policy reforms and maintain reform efforts to accelerate sustainable growth Policy recommendations cover fostering macroeconomic stability increasing investment in physical infrastructure enhancing human capital improving firms access to finance and lowering barriers to international trade and foreign investment inflows Integrated land use management systems in

Uzbekistan - Part 2 Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2024-02-22 The aim of this report is to describe and analyse the economic and business aspects of agroforestry implementation in Uzbekistan This information is presented with the goal of enabling the development of detailed and specific suggestions for land use contract development First the report presents an in depth literature review of studies that have examined the economic structure and viability of agroforestry and other agricultural practices in the region Specifically this review focuses on developing a nuanced understanding of relevant business structures economic relationships between various land users and local forestry officials and existing co management agreements and contracts that affect the economic viability of land use activities Current employment structure and land tenure conditions are also examined Second the report presents the findings of several field visits to pilot sites in Uzbekistan These field trips were organized by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and carried out by national experts Sirojiddin Eshmatov and Sobir Azizov Based on interviews and visits to farmers the study team collected information about the current economic situation of smallholder farmers and other land users These visits aimed in part to understand the specific economic and business considerations faced by agroforestry practitioners or interested land users in the pilot sites Together the two components form the empirical basis for a set of specific recommendations for land users and policymakers interested in developing agroforestry as an economically viable activity in the context of agriculture in Uzbekistan

Innovations in Sustainable Agricultural Systems, Volume 2 Irina Samoylenko, Toshpulot Rajabov, 2024-09-27 Sustainable agricultural systems are crucial for ensuring food security, conserving natural resources, and mitigating climate change. Innovations in this field play a crucial role in improving agricultural practices to make them more environmentally friendly, economically viable, and socially responsible. By implementing innovative approaches and technologies, sustainable agricultural systems can help address the challenges facing agriculture in the 21st century and build a more resilient and sustainable food system for the future. This multidisciplinary book focuses on the best practices in a range of areas such as I Intelligent agricultural techniques, tools, and systems; II Sustainability in veterinary practice; III Economic, ecological, and social systems for human development; IV Sustainable development of agricultural production. This book is a truly interdisciplinary publication useful to scholars, social movements, practitioners, and members of governmental agencies and private companies.

Agricultural extension in Central Asia: existing strategies and future needs Kazbekov, Jusipbek, Qureshi, Asad Sarwar, 2011-12-19 Agriculture is at the forefront of the development objectives of the republics of Central Asia (CA). Since independence in 1991, these countries have undergone transitions from being centrally planned economies to market-oriented systems, which did not include the creation of agricultural extension systems. This paper provides information on the current status of the agricultural extension systems in CA, with special reference to Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, and Uzbekistan. We reviewed the existing extension strategies, donor and state-driven initiatives to revitalize the agricultural extension systems, informal linkages that nongovernmental organizations play in helping a limited number of farmers, and provided recommendations on ways to further improve the agricultural extension services in CA. The information related to each country was analyzed separately. This is because after independence, each republic in CA had initiated their agricultural reforms with specific objectives and has now established their unique agricultural systems that differ contextually. However, due to having the same history and agricultural system that existed during the Soviet times we tried to give a historical perspective to the unified agricultural extension system that existed before independence
