Rural Health Providers in South-West Uganda Mohammad A. M. Kisubi, Justus Mugaju, 1999      Reproductive Rights in a Global Context Lara M. Knudsen, 2006 Examines women's access to sex education maternity care family planning and abortion and analyzes how much power women in diverse contexts have to negotiate sexual practices This book is suitable for courses in women's studies globalization public health and political science      Decentralization and Development Partnership Fumihiko Saito, 2012-12-06 Decentralization an essential pillar of institutional reform is of critical importance in developing countries particularly in regard to democratization effective development and good governance Uganda since 1986 and the start of decentralization measures under Yoweri Museveni and the National Resistance Movement has represented one of the most serious commitments in Sub Saharan Africa With the benefit of extensive fieldwork Fumihiko Saito demonstrates how conflict resolution information dissemination and encouragement of the many and varied stakeholders to form partnerships are critical to successfully bringing services closer to the people Decentralization and Development Partnerships Lessons from Uganda goes beyond theory to compare academic assumptions to the reality of decentralization implementation in modern Uganda Although the process is by no means free of difficulties Saito concludes that a win win outcome is a real possibility      Historical Dictionary of Uganda Joseph Kasule, 2022-06-22 Historical Dictionary of Uganda Second Edition covers the history of Uganda using a chronology an introductory essay appendixes and a bibliography The dictionary section covers many entries on politics economy foreign affairs religion society culture and important personalities      Cumulated Index Medicus ,1970      Between Militarism and Technocratic Governance Anders Sjögren, 2013 State civil society relations in Africa have during recent decades been transformed in the context of economic liberalisation and state reform This study explores state civil society relations in contemporary Uganda from 1986 to the present in order to illustrate and explain the scope for and capacity of different social forces to create access to and democratise the state The study interrogates state civil society relations under the incumbent National Resistance Movement government as these are expressed through forms of interest representation and conflict regulation in different political arenas It analyses this problem through an empirical study of the health sector at both national and local levels Changes in the health regime the rules and practices that regulate health politics are analysed by a historical reconstruction of how different health regimes evolved from demands from social forces on the colonial and post colonial state in relation to broader patterns of political change The ruling political coalition from 1986 has promoted a model for capitalist development based on donor driven economic growth institutional reform and political monopoly what is referred to in the study as technocratic governance Throughout however the technocratic tendency has been shaped in relation to the political economy of militarism as a more openly repressive form of authoritarian rule The study argues that limits to democratisation of state society relations within the health sector and of Ugandan politics at large are best explained by relations of domination in society within the state and among external political forces The main conclusion is that democratisation of the state has been resisted by ruling groups and therefore restricted *G.K. Insights Into Gender Equity, Equality and Power Relations in Sub-Saharan Africa Mansah Prah, 2013 Since gender entered the development discourse in the Seventies African countries have increasingly taken the concept on board in policy and practice. This concern may be due to either one or a combination of the following factors: the ideological positioning of African countries demanded by their donors and development partners and demands by organised local groups and NGOs. Gender in the development discourse ought to transform power relations between men and women and shift them to social relations that reflect their equal access to productive resources, opportunities and social and material benefits. The result of such actions should be an achievement of comparable status of women and men. This volume initiated by OSSREA seeks to examine in more depth issues regarding the gender power imbalance in sub-Saharan African countries with a specific focus on the eastern and southern African regions. The chapters in this book present research that examines and analyses the effectiveness and efficiency of gender mainstreaming policies, strategies and projects developed and implemented by national and international actors. The themes interweave with each other although they address gender issues in specific countries and specific contexts. This can be explained by the shared colonial and post colonial heritage of African countries. It is useful therefore to view the structure of the book as a spiral of inter-connected issues that address similar themes approaching them from different levels. Purely for ease of reading the contributions have been organised into three parts with overarching themes that at first glance may seem not to fit well together. A theme that runs through all the chapters is the persistence of patriarchal values and attitudes in Africa and its constraining effect on the achievement of gender equity and equality.
