Hunter, 2025-05-15

Some ten thousand years ago hunter gatherers moving through a landscape newly emerged from the grip of the last Ice Age reached four islands on the western seaboard The shores they landed on were deserted After making camp they struck out to hunt and explore We know this because the evidence of their presence has been preserved down the millennia in traces of flint and quartz in charred fragments of grain and animal bone in great heaped piles of ancient shellfish The islands were Rum Eigg Canna and Muck four distinctive shapes rising from the waters of the Inner Hebrides between Ardnamurchan and Skye Collectively they are known as the Small Isles From those first moments on people have been working these islands and using their resources adapting each landscape to suit the changing needs of the communities they served In this definitive new book archaeologist John Hunter searches for the stories of the Small Isles in the evidence that survives from the fragmentary physical remains of dwellings defences places of worship and monuments to the records of early antiquarians historians and travellers This is a journey to rediscover communities that were erased by the mass migrations of the nineteenth century and the rise of the Victorian sporting estate Within a few generations cultural identity on the islands disappeared and a new order developed Placenames were changed buildings and structures abandoned and traditions forgotten The Small Isles became islands without memories This comprehensive guide illustrated with a wealth of photographs maps and drawings takes readers on a tour of both place and time Crisscrossing the landscapes of four fascinating and evocative islands it reveals traces of a forgotten past in everything that has been left behind Canna John Lorne Campbell, 2017-07-05 This is the definitive history of Canna one of the most beautiful of all the Scottish islands Fertile and with a sheltered harbour Canna has played an important part in the story of the Hebrides After the Reformation the island was of considerable importance to the Irish Franciscan mission of the 1620s and also the Jacobite risings before it was swept up in the tragedies of depopulation and clearances of the nineteenth century Gifted to the National Trust in 1981 the island is currently undergoing something of a revival with the creation of the St Edward Centre on Sanday and the proposed developments of Canna House Recent archaeological surveys and historical research has uncovered much new evidence about the island Hugh Cheape of the Royal Museum of Scotland who has been intimately involved in the Canna project has fully edited the book New contributions both update and fill out the account of the island
