

A news anchor, a man with a beard wearing a dark blazer over a blue shirt, stands in the foreground. Behind him, a line of riot police in full protective gear, including helmets and shields, is visible. In the background, there is a large red brick building. The scene appears to be outdoors during a protest or riot.

The Bulletin , 1990 The Other Brother Geoff Elliott, 2005 It was early morning when Bodo Muche jolted upright from a deeply unsettling dream He was in a cold sweat and felt ill An image of a rickety bridge was seared onto the back of his eyes It was a picture he could not shake Muche had long ago learnt not to dwell on things too much you could go crazy otherwise But his feeling that morning was that something awful had happened to someone somewhere In May 1977 as South Africa teetered on the brink of civil war Simon Holmes a Court younger brother of billionaire Robert Holmes a Court left the Botswanan town he called his home and simply disappeared Three years later his skeletal remains were found a thousand miles away in the lush dank Tsitsikamma forest Simon s mother was convinced he had been murdered This is the story of the shy adventuring and sometimes reckless Holmes a Court brother and the young journalist who went in search of the truth about Simon's death. It is peopled with everybody from a white Johannesburg witchdoctor to a hard drinking and rumour fuelled expat community living on the edge of the vast inland Okavango Delta, the South African secret service and a free spirited married woman with whom Simon fell helplessly in love. The Other Brother is a fascinating mystery compellingly told that takes you deep into Africa to expose the tragedy that lies at the heart of one of Australia's most prominent families.

Letters and Diaries of Kathleen Ferrier Kathleen Ferrier, 2003

Within a decade this former telephone exchange operator was singing on stage at Covent Garden or before royalty at private parties. She must have been fun to know and from this collection of letters just over three hundred of them gathered from sources in Britain, America, Canada and Holland as well as twelve years of her personal diaries, what emerges provides a sunny picture in the gloomy landscape of post Second World War days.

'Strandentwining Cable' Scarlett Baron, 2012

Scarlett Baron explores the works of two of the most admired and mythologized masters of nineteenth and twentieth century prose, Gustave Flaubert (1822-1880) and James Joyce (1882-1941). She uncovers the lifelong fascination that Joyce harboured for Flaubert and investigates how this heightened interest inflected his own creative practice.

Race and State Karen

Fricker, Ronit Lentin, 2009-01-14. Speaking about racism in the western political climate of the first decade of the twenty first century is more difficult than ever before. There is a feeling in post colonial and post immigration societies that the blatant overt racism of the past is no longer as pressing. Admitting racism elicits discomfort because common wisdom tells us that racism opposes everything that we believe in as citizens of democratic civilised modern states. Yet state racism appears to be here to stay and in many ways is more acceptable than ever before. Immigration detention centres, the deportation of failed asylum seekers and illegal immigrants, racial profiling and the rolling back of liberties won by the civil rights movement are all examples of how state racism impacts on our daily lives. Race and State contributes to breaking the taboo of discussing the links between race and state. The papers collected in this book highlight the interconnections between race and state from historical, theoretical or contemporary sociological perspectives. Part I of the book looks at theoretical issues in conceptualising the race/state relationship. Part II examines racism in its most pernicious contemporary manifestation, the racialisation of terror. Part III on the racial state of Ireland is an important addition to the debate examining Ireland as a test case for demonstrating and interpreting the relationship between race and state.

A Commonwealth of the People

David Rollison, 2010-01-21. In 1500 fewer than three million people spoke English; today English speakers number at least a billion worldwide. This book asks how and why a small island people became the nucleus of an empire on which the sun never set. David Rollison argues that the English explosion was the outcome of a long social revolution with roots deep in the medieval past. A succession of crises from the Norman Conquest to the English Revolution were causal links and chains of collective memory in a unique vernacular populist movement. The keyword of this long revolution, commonwealth, has been largely invisible in traditional constitutional history This panoramic synthesis of political intellectual social cultural religious economic literary and linguistic movements offers a new constitutional history in which state institutions and power elites were subordinate and answerable to a greater community that the early modern English called commonwealth and we call society

Understanding Conflict Imaginaries Simon Philpott, Nicholas Morgan, 2022-08-01 This Palgrave Pivot argues that if we are to understand civil conflict we need to grasp how everyday life is shaped by local conflict imaginaries In order to examine this claim the book sets out to explore the contours of conflict imaginaries from two very different sites of conflict Both Colombia and Indonesia have suffered from the collective trauma of political violence but in very different social cultural and political contexts Sketching out what they mean by a conflict imaginary and explaining the relationship of this key concept to social imaginaries more broadly the authors provide a historical overview of how political violence has been represented in both countries They go on to outline the original qualitative research methods used to provide empirical evidence for the importance of conflict imaginaries methods which allow them to explore the images and metaphors that underpin the spatial chronological and emotional cartographies through which people make sense of political violence With an emphasis on the construction of place based knowledge they consider the role of the local the national and the global in the imagining of civil conflict and show how film can be used to explore the imaginative worlds of social actors living alongside violence revealing in the process the need to take seriously their hopes fears dreams and fantasies

Entrepreneurs and the Spanish Contractor State in the Eighteenth Century Rafael Torres Sánchez, 2016-07-01 Military Entrepreneurs and the Spanish Contractor State in the Eighteenth Century offers a new approach to the relationship between warfare and state construction Historians looking at how war funding impinged on state development and how state growth made wars more significant have tended to downplay the role of military provisioning entrepreneurs Written off as corrupt and selfish these entrepreneurs jarred with the received view of a rationally growing and modernising state This volume shows that the state entrepreneur relationship was much more fluid and constant than previously thought The state was not able to enforce a top down military supply policy at the same time it benefited from the entrepreneurs collaboration and their shared mercantilist ambitions The entrepreneurs mobilisation of military supplies was crucial for extending state authority and helped to knit together national and colonial markets But this fluid state entrepreneur relationship gradually became shrouded in privileges and monopolies not so much ideology driven or imposed by the entrepreneurs but rather as an arrangement exploited by the state to boost its control over them whittling down middlemen and ensuring the solvency and creditworthiness of the chosen few This arrangement spiralled into a risky inter dependence and cramped entrepreneurial competition Rafael Torres Sánchez furnishes new insights into the role of military entrepreneurs in debates about warfare and state construction Unattached Women, Able-Bodied Men Tista Das, 2022-09-23 This book is one of the few gendered histories of the Partition experience in Bengal Tracing the afterlife of the Partition in Bengal through the gendered experience of displacement and resettlement it analyses the spatial reconfigurations that were brought about Drawing heavily on police records private papers newspapers and memoirs this work enters the realm of personal time in the lives of the migrant and refugee and follows them to see how the spaces that they inhabited the city of Calcutta and its suburbs were transformed to accommodate them and imposed with new meanings and one might say new borders It highlights how fear came to be the dominant emotion associated with the migrants flight how it was subsequently politicized and how it became the cornerstone of the refugees bargaining with the state Furthermore it focuses on how the state in its attempt to become a charitable institution put in place a gendered structure of relief and later rehabilitation This work also shows how camps and colonies became the sites of political contestation how the refugees found a brand of Leftist politics particularly useful for their purpose and how it became the cornerstone of their newfound identity A major intervention in Partition studies the volume will be of great interest to scholars and researchers of South Asian history migration and diaspora studies gender studies and politics

The Planter ,1997 The Emergency Brian Girvin,2006 Brian Girvin has written a fresh and original history of Ireland between 1939 and 1945 Drawing on new sources and recent scholarship he tells the story of what is known as The Emergency in Ireland but elsewhere as the Second World War Despite Ireland still being a member of the Commonwealth Eamon de Valera refused to join the war against Nazi Germany and declared his country neutral To the endless frustration and anger of Churchill and later Roosevelt de Valera pursued an isolationist policy that changed the course of Irish domestic and foreign politics In this brilliantly argued account Girvin shows how this policy went against the national interest and far from being the only option for the Government was simply the only one they would consider This decision Girvin concludes cost de Valera his ultimate prize a united Ireland Woven into this political maelstrom are the stories of the people who lived through those difficult years Bold fearless and compelling The Emergency is a unique and important addition to any understanding of Ireland and the Second World War
