Rural Settlement Structure And African Development Marilyn Silberfein, 2019-09-16 This volume is the result of a group of researchers applying their insights and experience to a common theme All the authors are concerned with rural development in Africa and all have focused on the connection between the development process and the arrangement of people and their built environment in rural space Both anthropologists and geo graphers have contributed to the dialogue on this subject and represen tatives of the two disciplines are included in this volume The members of this group have never all been in the same place at the same time and so have utilized various electronic modes of commu nication to link their locations around the world Two conferences were organized however among a subset of the whole in order to generate a group discussion One of these meetings was a symposium on African rural development held at Temple University while a second was orga nized at the African Studies Association Meetings in Toronto Both opportunities helped raise issues that found their way into individual chapters The audience in each case further stimulated our thinking

Nomadic Peoples and Human Rights Jérémie Gilbert, 2014-03-26 Although nomadic peoples are scattered worldwide and have highly heterogeneous lifestyles they face similar threats to their mobile livelihood and survival Commonly nomadic peoples are facing pressure from the predominant sedentary world over mobility land rights water resources access to natural resources and migration routes Adding to these traditional problems rapid growth in the extractive industry and the need for the exploitation of the natural resources are putting new strains on nomadic lifestyles This book provides an innovative rights based approach to the issue of nomadism looking at issues including discrimination persecution freedom of movement land rights cultural and political rights and effective management of natural resources Jeremie Gilbert analyses the extent to which human rights law is able to provide protection for nomadic peoples to perpetuate their own way of life and culture The book questions whether the current human rights regime is able to protect nomadic peoples and highlights the lacuna that currently exists in international human rights law in relation to nomadic peoples It goes on to propose avenues for the development of specific rights for nomadic peoples offering a new reading on freedom of movement land rights and development in the context of nomadism

Rural Arab Demography and Early Jewish Settlement in Palestine David Grossman, 2017-09-08 This volume explores the distribution of the rural population in Palestine from the late Ottoman period 1870 1917 to the British Mandate period 1917 1948 The book focuses on demography specifically migrations population size density growth and the pattern of distribution in rural Palestine before the inception of Jewish settlement 1882 Grossman traces little known Muslim ethnic groups who settled in Palestine s rural areas primarily Egyptians but also Algerians Bosnians and Circassians The author argues that the Arab population in the zones occupied by Jews after 1882 was about one third that of the Arab core areas in the period studied the decline in per capita rural Arab farmland was mainly due to overall population growth not displacement of Arabs economic development suffered largely because of violent disturbances and natural disasters the pattern of growth of Egyptian and other Muslim groups was similar to that of the Jews The main conclusions of this study note that the size of the rural Arab population in the zones occupied by Jews after 1882 was about one tenth of that which occupied the Arab core zones most Egyptian settlement areas coincided with those of the Jewish zones between 1870 and 1945 the decline of Arab farmland was mainly due to Arab population growth rather than Jewish land acquisitions and most migrants Jewish and Muslim settlement zones were leftovers characterized by some form of resource disability

Roman Palmyra Andrew M. Smith II, 2013-01-02 In social economic and cultural terms the eastern frontier of the Roman Empire was vastly complex which has fueled considerable debate among scholars concerning the nature of the interactions between Romans and natives in the Near East Notions of imperialism specifically cultural imperialism frame much of the debate Through a detailed analysis of Palmyrene identity and community formation Andrew M Smith II presents a social and political history of Roman Palmyra the oasis city situated deep in the Syrian Desert midway between Damascus and the Euphrates river This city state is unique in the ancient world since it began as a humble community probably no more than an isolated village and grew due in part to its role in the caravan trade into an economically powerful cosmopolitan urban center of Graeco Roman character that operated outside of Roman rule yet under

Roman patronage The book therefore focuses on two aspects of Palmyrene civilization during the first three centuries of the Common Era the emergence and subsequent development of Palmyra as a commercial and political center in the desert frontier between Rome and Parthia and later Persia and the making of Palmyrenes This study is thus concerned with the creation structure and maintenance of Palmyrene identity and that of Palmyra as an urban community in a volatile frontier zone The history of Palmyra s communal development would be wholly obscure were it not for the archaeological and epigraphic materials that testify to Palmyrene achievements and prosperity at home and abroad These complemented by the literary evidence also provide insight into the relatively obscure historical process of sedentarization and of the relationships between pastoral and sedentary communities in the Roman Near East In addition to examining Palmyra as a frontier community the book will move beyond Syria to explore the development and maintenance of Palmyrene identity in diaspora settings in Italy north Africa and Europe This study is thus concerned with the creation structure and maintenance of Palmyrene identity and that of Palmyra as an urban community in a volatile frontier zone

From Slumber to Awakening Mishaël Caspi, Jerome David Weltsch, 1998 From Slumber to Awakening argues that when investigating the cultural and historical predicament of segments of any society a close examination of the literal expression of the people is necessary to understand their human condition better To accomplish this the individual psyches of authors and poets must be delved into and in this case was accessed through personal interviews This study approaches the unique social position of the Arab Israelis through an exploration of culture and history The examination of the literature itself begins with Israeli literature from the broad perspectives of both the prose and poetry forms and then moving into the literature and literati themselves one by one exploring the lives of the writers while superimposing their human experiences with the expressions and stories of their creative works This examination along with the interviews defines the Arab Israeli minority as a group while also comparing them to Jewish Israeli writers who are close to the Arab Israeli situation

McGee, 1991-01-01 Asian urbanization is entering a new phase that differs significantly from the patterns of city growth experienced in other developing countries and in the developed world According to a recent hypothesis zones of intensive economic interaction between rural and urban activities are emerging The zones appear to be a new form of socioeconomic organization that is neither rural nor urban but preserves essential ingredients of each

BOOK JACKET The Religions of Ancient Israel Ziony Zevit, 2003-06-01 This is the most far reaching interdisciplinary investigation into the religion of ancient Israel ever attempted The author draws on textual readings archaeological and historical data and epigraphy to determine what is known about the Israelite religions during the Iron Age 1200-586 BCE. The evidence is synthesized within the structure of an Israelite worldview and ethos involving kin, tribes, land, traditional ways and places of worship and a national deity. Professor Zevit has originated this interpretive matrix through insights, ideas and models developed in the academic study of religion and history within the context of the humanities. He is strikingly original for instance in his contention that much of the Psalter was composed in praise of deities other than Yahweh. Through his book the author has set a precedent which should encourage dialogue and cooperative study between all ancient historians and archaeologists but particularly between Iron Age archaeologists and biblical scholars. The work challenges many conclusions of previous scholarship about the nature of the Israelites' religion.

The Origin of Early Israel-Current Debate Shmuel Ahituv, Eliezer Oren, 2017-07-12. The origin of Israel, their settlement in the land of Canaan and transformation into an organized kingdom is one of the most stimulating and controversial chapters in the history of ancient Israel. In this volume three of the researchers who have presented key models regarding this era—Finkelstein, Whitelam and Kitchen—offer their latest thinking and are critiqued by a panel of other scholars using biblical, historical, archaeological, anthropological and comparative Near Eastern data. An important introduction to the debate over this crucial question.

Pottery and Social Life in Medieval England Ben Jervis, 2014-07-31. How can pottery studies contribute to the study of medieval archaeology? How do pots relate to documents, landscapes and identities? These are the questions addressed in this book which develops a new approach to the study of pottery in medieval archaeology. Utilising an interpretive framework which focuses upon the relationships between people, places and things, the effect of the production, consumption and discard of pottery is considered to see pottery not as reflecting medieval life but as one actor which contributed to the development of multiple experiences and realities in medieval England. By focussing on relationships we move away from viewing pottery simply as an object of study in its own right to see it as a central component to developing understandings of medieval society. The case studies presented explore how we might use relational approaches to re-consider our approaches to medieval landscapes, overcome the methodological and theoretical divisions between documents and material culture and explore how the use of objects could have multiple implications for the formation and maintenance of identities. The use of this approach makes this book not only of interest to pottery specialists but also to any archaeologist seeking to develop new interpretive approaches to medieval archaeology and the archaeological study of material culture.
