Rural Women Leadership:

Rural Women in Leadership Lori Ann McVay, 2013-09-18 Rural women and leadership have in recent years come to be the focus of development initiatives in many countries To date however much of the writing on this topic has focused heavily on obstacles rather than facilitative factors in women s attainment of leadership positions Citing examples from a case study in Northern Ireland this book gives voice to the many vital positive elements in rural women s leadership development

Discovering an Untapped Resource Armine Ishkhanian, Ann Graham, Gulnara Shahinyan, Center for Russian, Central and East European Studies, 2002 Emerging Pattern of Rural Women Leadership in India A. Celine Rani, 2002 73rd Amendment to the Constitution of India has created a legitimate political space from women to establish governance at the grassroots for the purpose of achieving economic development and administering social justice Occupying the space by the rustic women folk is not an easy task though it is legitimate for them This work focuses its attention on the process of recruitment of the women to the various panchayat positions It seeks to analyse the pattern of their emergence This study captures the bases of power that operates at the micro level The whole analysis is based on the scientific application of Positional Reputational and Decision making approaches and the integration of all the three approaches

Rural Women Leaders Kathleen A. Staudt, 1978 Attributes of Successful Rural Women Leaders and Their Contribution to the Leadership Journey Anita M. Hall, 2007 Rural Women's Leadership in Atlantic Canada Louise Irene Carbert, 2006-01-01

Most people are aware of the large and persistent gender imbalance in elected office at all levels of government in Canada but few appreciate the far greater imbalance that occurs outside of large cities This deficit arises not from rural voter bias but from low numbers of female candidates running for winnable seats The question of why there are so few female candidates has been difficult to answer largely because we know so little about the pool of potential candidates Rural Women s Leadership in Atlantic Canada presents results from a regional field based study which confronted this challenge directly for the first time Louise Carbert gathered together small groups of rural community leaders 126 women in all throughout the four Atlantic provinces and interviewed them about their experiences and perceptions of leadership public life and running for elected office Their answers paint a vivid picture of politics in rural communities illustrating how it intersects with family life work and the overall local economy Through discussion of their own reasoned aversion to holding elected office and of resistance encountered by those who have put their names forward the interviewees shed much needed light on the pervasive barriers to the election of women Carbert not only contextualizes the results in terms of economic and demographic structures of rural Atlantic Canada but also considers points of comparison and contrast with other parts of the country

Women Leadership, Decentralised Governance and Development D. Rajasekhar, R. Manjula, 2024-10-21 This book discusses experiences of women leaders in decentralised government structure in India and their participation in governance. The book also examines contribution of women leaders to the development of local area and economy through improved delivery of public services. In India, the policy of reserving seats and executive positions to women in the Panchayati Raj Institutions, grassroot governance bodies in India.

at the village sub district and district levels and urban local bodies was introduced three decades ago to improve representation of women at the grassroots level and enable them to access political decision making at the local level. Because of the policy about half of three million leaders in local government are currently women. The book explores the impact of this significant representation of women on decentralised governance and development. It looks at why this impressive representation of women in the local government has not translated into improved participation of women at the provincial and national parliament. The book discusses successful models, experiences of women leaders from different parts in India and challenges faced by them. It offers new interpretations of findings and new methodologies to assess the contribution of women to decentralised governance and development. It is a rich source of material for researchers, teachers, practitioners, policymakers, NGOs and think tanks.

This book provides guidelines for introducing community based gender analysis to practical development concerns through developing gender sensitive training activities for practitioners and community members in the developing world in Asia, Africa and Latin America. Based on national and international training projects and best practices and extensive experiences in the promotion of gender awareness and women's capacity building in China as well as internationally, this training manual provides a valuable blueprint for capacity building activities and training projects in developing countries in the promotion of social development and gender equality.
