Palmer The Duck Catcher Moses Aaron, David Mackintosh, 2004 Gombei the duck catcher goes out each day to catch a duck for his family's dinner. He does this by tying a loop into the end of a rope. When the duck steps into it, Gombei pulls it tight and the duck is caught. His friends ridicule him. They tell him that his father and grandfather used to catch many more ducks each day than just one, but Gombei tells them they had bigger families with more mouths to feed. But when it snows one morning, Gombei realises that he can save himself having to go out in bad weather by catching a hundred ducks. So he makes a hundred rope traps, a hundred ducks walk into them, and Gombei is very pleased with himself. Until a noise frightens the ducks and they all take flight with Gombei still holding onto the ropes. High up in the air, he lets go, and as he falls something strange happens. Gombei grows a beak, feathers, and wings. He lands back on the ground as a duck, and when a hunter traps him, Gombei yells out to tell him that he is not a duck, he's a man. The hunter thinks he's hearing things and bolts away in fright. And Gombei is free. As he finds himself turning back into a man, he resolves never to catch ducks for food again.

Homer Street Laurie Duggan, 2020-07 Celebrated poet Laurie Duggan's first collection with Giramondo. Laurie Duggan's new collection begins with poems written during his last year in Britain in Faversham, a market town in east Kent, with others written on a visit to Australia in 2016 and after his return in October 2018. They contribute to two ongoing sequences: Allotments and Blue Hills, which alludes to the long-running domestic radio serial of the same name. These are made up of the brief haiku-like poems that Duggan has made his own: impressions, mysterious conjunctions, oddities, and contradictions, the small details that express large forces, as in his observations of the landscape, the weather, domestic and suburban settings. In the final section Afterimages, Duggan offers descriptions of paintings and comments on artists and sometimes imaginary constructions of what a particular artist might have done, but the real point is to create poems which stand like art works in their own right. Dinosaur Day Out Sara Acton, 2019-08-26
