Marubbio,2006-12-15 Killing the Indian Maiden examines the fascinating and often disturbing portrayal of Native American women in film M Elise Marubbio examines the sacrificial role in which a young Native woman allies herself with a white male hero and dies as a result of that choice In studying thirty four Hollywood films from the silent period to the present she draws upon theories of colonization gender race and film studies to ground her analysis in broader historical and sociopolitical context and to help answer the question What does it mean to be

Viewing stories and novels from an ethnographic perspective Eduardo González here explores the relationship between myth ritual and death in writings by Borges Vargas Llosa Cortázar and Roa Bastos He then weaves this analysis into a larger cultural fabric composed of the works of Chaucer Shakespeare Joyce Benjamin H G Wells Kafka Poe and others What interests González is the signature of authorial selfhood in narrative and performance which he finds willfully and temptingly disfigured in the works he examines horrific and erotic subservient and tyrannical charismatic and repellent Searching out the personal image and plot González uncovers two fundamental types of narrative one that strips character of moral choice and another in which characters choices deprive them of personal autonomy and hold them in ritual bondage to a group Thus The Monstered Self becomes a study of the conflict between individual autonomy and the stereotypes of solidarity Written in a characteristically allusive elliptical style and drawing on psychoanalysis religion mythology and comparative literature The Monstered Self is in itself a remarkable performance one that will engage readers in anthropology psychology and cultural history as well as those specifically interested in Latin American narrative The Largesse of the Sea Maiden Denis
