On grieving: Grief is a pilgrimage along a path that allows us to reflect upon the past from points of remembrance held in the soul. At times the way is filled with stones underfoot and we feel pained by our memories yet on other days the shadows reflect our longing and those happinesses shared.

On the importance of departure: Leaving that which you love breaks your heart open. But you will find a jewel inside and this precious jewel is the opening of your heart to all that is new and all that is different and it will be the making of you if you allow it to be.

The perfect supplement to the Maisie Dobbs series. What Would Maisie Do also features the iconic jacket art that has graced the series as well as period photographs and prompts for readers' own observations and inspiration making this a unique journal that fans will turn to and treasure for years to come.

of Sean Griswold's head in most of her classes and has for as long as she can remember. They've been linked since third grade. Griswold's is an alphabetical order thing, but aside from loaning Sean countless number two pencils, she's never really noticed him. Then Payton's guidance counselor tells her she needs a focus object, something to concentrate her emotions on while she deals with her dad's multiple sclerosis. The object is supposed to be inanimate, but Payton chooses Sean Griswold's head. It's much cuter than the atom models or anything else she stares at. As Payton starts stalking, focusing on Sean's big blond head, her research quickly grows into something a little less scientific and a lot more crush-like. And once she really gets inside his head, Payton also lets Sean into her guarded heart. But obsessing over Sean won't fix Payton's fear of her dad's illness. For that, she'll have to focus on herself.
